REFORM.

WRITTEN FOR THE NEW YORK CLIPPER,
BY "DOBBS."

"Give us reform!" is the popular cry
Of political hacks and our local small fry.
"Give us reform!" from the east to the west;
But it's now time, I think, that they give us a rest.
At the club, in the bar-room, the hotel or street,
They're naught but reformers, each one that we meet.
In fact, just as soon as a young one is born,
Or he first learns to speak, he will yell out "reform!"

There's a poor, wretched object that often we meet,
With uncertain footsteps he wanders the street;
He's a drunkard, a sot, and in all this broad land
He has'nt a friend he can take by the hand;
He would like to do better—that is, if he can—
And be once again what he was—a true man;
But the people all shun him, or treat him with scorn,
Or give him a kick while they shriek for "reform!"

Come out in the gloom and the darkness of night,
When the moon and the stars 'neath the clouds hide their light.
Here's a woman, a "lost one," who crosses our way,
Perhaps a "reformer" has led her astray.
Must she always go on in her life of despair
Until death puts an end to her trouble and care?
Her hope of redemption, I fear, is forlorn,
For the people just now are insane for "reform."

The fact of it is, this reform is a "beat;"
A field full of tares with a few grains of wheat,
And it's my firm belief, tho' I go it alone,
Our "reform" will be best when we start it at home.
Let us give the right hand to the ailing and weak,
And to the descending a pleasant word speak;
Let us give of the substance, not merely the form,
And let the devil take all other kinds of reform.

CHAPTER XLIV.

EVERTON CHURCHYARD.

There is nothing half so picturesque in England's favored isle as the village churches and churchyards. If only from association, they are so to the more refined of the local inhabitants, while to strangers from afar they have a nameless charm. The little cemetery—or God's acre—which lay under the shadow of the ivy-clad tower of the church, was small, for the parish was of little extent, but it had its quaint features and gloomy attractions, one of which was a double row of aged elm and cypress trees, which bordered a wide avenue. It was also sufficiently rural and primitive to contain a thatched old cottage, built of wood and stone, which served the purpose of the sexton and bell-ringer, who, in those days, actually did his own work. Silent Death—his real name was Croxon—as he was called, gloried in having buried every member of the community for fifty years. He had amassed money, and could have retired. But wife, sons and daughters, and their sons and daughters, had passed away, mostly by death, some by emigration, and he clung to his office and its emoluments. It gave him importance and added to his store. Except an occasional visit to the village ale-house, chiefly on Saturday nights, his walks were confined to the churchyard, where, walking up and down the centre avenue, he contemplated his handiwork. He was a thin, wiry, and spare man; but, for seventy odd years old, extremely active. Besides his kind of quarter-deck stroll—and he was on his own ground—he cared only for his pipe and glass, and the society of an old dog, the descendant of many a generation of canine favorites, pretty freely distributed over the parish by the Evertons. He sat with his door open one March evening, contemplating the setting sun. From habit his Bible was open before him, but his spectacles lay between the leaves. His glass was to his hand, and his pipe in his mouth. A hearty old man he appeared, the picture of happiness. The dog which slept at his feet suddenly raised his head and whined.

"Who comes?" said the old man, aloud; "tis not often visitors trouble us at this hour."

He was right. Both the churchyard and the sexton had an uncanny reputation, and the people of the village, with rare exceptions, avoided that locality after dark. The lads and lassies would sooner have courted in a charnel house. It was a smart, light step, however, that came up the great avenue and halted before the hut. A tall young man, with a slouched hat, a kind of blouse, a knapsack and heavy stick in his hand.

"Is this the sexton's house?" said a clear and singularly musical voice.

"It is. I am he whom the people call Silent Death," chuckled the old man; "but if you have aught to say, come in and be seated."

With which he pushed a chair near the door for the stranger, who thanked him and sat down without removing his hat, which, considering the draught between the door and the chimney, was only natural.

"Will you taste my brandy, sir?" said the hospitable sexton; "it is none of the worst."

"Well, the night is cold and the churchyard damp; I have no objection," replied the youth.

The sexton poured out a small wine glass full, which the stranger drank.

"Do you keep the keys of the church—of the vaults?" said the other, evidently rousing himself to something like determination.

"I do—why?" asked the sexton, glancing at the other curiously.

"Because I should like to visit the vault of the Evertons," he faltered.

As he said these words he looked the old sexton full in the face, the light of the lamp falling clear upon his own.

"Certainly," said the sexton, rising with alacrity and taking down both a bunch of keys and a lantern, to which, having transferred a candle, he led the way in the direction of the old Saxon church.

The vaults were entered by a flight of steps outside the church. The door was heavy, and, from want of use, stuck fast; but the sexton was accustomed to his task, and finally it opened, and, stooping under the low crowned arch, they entered. The deep, unbroken silence, the spacious gloom connected with a place of sepulchre made them both silent for a moment, while they moved with slow and stealthy footsteps. The young stranger had reverently taken off his hat.

"Which is the coffin of Lady Everton?" he asked, in choking accents.

"Yonder be the remains of Lady Frances Everton—your mother," replied the sexton.

As he said this there was a strange and peculiar look in his eyes. But, without an answer, the young man cast himself on his knees, and for some minutes nothing was heard save the sobbing prayer of the afflicted youth. Presently he rose, looked reverently at the coffin which contained the mortal remains of his father, and, with a haughty wave of the hand, signalled to Silent Death to lead the way.

"So, old man," he said, as soon as they were once more in the churchyard, "you knew me at once?"

The sexton bowed low.

"At the first word you spoke. For fifty years have all the Evertons, save one, been kind to me, and it has been my fate to bury them. I wonder whether I shall bury him?"

"Not in the family vault, old friend," cried Arthur, shaking him by the hand. "And now tell me what has become of all the old servants."

"They were dismissed when your mother died," said the sexton; "but they were all pensioned, and live hereabouts—Cartwise, the butler; the old coachman, two of the grooms and Mrs. Short, the housekeeper. Every Wednesday the men meet at the "Barley Mow," and, of all evenings in the year, this here is Wednesday."

"I have come down privately, Croxon, to be identified. Mr. Charles Everton declares I am an impostor and refuses me my birthright. Now, if you and all the old servants recognise me it will go a long way."

"Sir Arthur, no one who knew your noble father could doubt one moment. Come with me at once and you will see that I am right," urged the sexton.

"I will be guided by you. But, remember, I have an enemy to deal with, cruel as a tiger and cunning as a serpent, and, therefore, my presence down here must be kept a secret from all but sincere friends."

"It shall. Your will, sir, is law in Everton. One moment and I am ready."

The old man re-entered his hut, changed his coat and hat, clutched a great knotted stick, and bidding the dog keep good guard, closed his cabin-door and led the way to the village. The inn was at no great distance from the church and was soon reached. It was one blaze of light. On these festive occasions, the old servants of the house had the best parlor to themselves. Everyone respected the real and true Everton family. The sexton entered, nodded to the landlord in a very significant way and approached the door of the room, which was never entered without that worthy's permission.

Leaving his wife to attend to ordinary customers, John Briggs followed the sexton. He knew him of old, and knew that he never did anything without a reason. The sexton entered, followed by his companion, and then by John Briggs, who closed the door after him. There were six men seated at a large table, with pipes and glasses.

"Friends all," said the sexton, removing the young man's wide-awake, "need I tell you who this is?"

"The master!" was the one word which was uttered on all sides, as the whole party rose to their feet.

"Many thanks," said Arthur, deeply moved. "And now, if you will all be silent and discreet, I will tell you why I am here, alone and in disguise."

All stared with open mouths, but after a few exclamations, reseated themselves. Their glasses were refilled, and the door being fastened inside, the youth told his story over again, amid profound silence, interrupted only by one or two exclamations of horror.

"You will see," he said, as he concluded, "why secrecy is requisite. Charles Everton will hesitate at nothing to keep me out of my own. My life has been attempted several times already, and will, I feel, be attempted again. Until, therefore, I communicate with my friends I must remain concealed, and my name must not even be whispered. I have your promises?"

All solemnly gave the required undertaking, and then a conference was held. The butler offered his house, which was, however, on the edge of the village. He then suggested that his youngest daughter—all the rest were married—and Styles, the gamekeeper's son, with whom she was keeping company, should hide him. He was a man of singularly trustworthy character, and was devoted to the family. As soon as this resolution was come to, the party broke up, the butler and the old coachman undertaking to convey their young master to his place of shelter. A bowl of punch, however, was first brought in, in which the young man drank all their healths, shook them heartily by the hand, and then retired. His hat was drawn over his eyes, his coat-collar turned up, he had unstrapped one from the top of his knapsack, and he walked between his faithful retainers.

The butler's house was soon reached. As the old man expected, the young keeper, Styles, was there, in company with his daughter. Their surprise at this early return was great; but when the young baronet was introduced, and the reason for his visit explained, they were half dismayed.

"Father 'ull hide you, sir," cried young Styles; "and if any varmint comes skulking, I'll shoot 'un!"

"Hide the master, my boy, but no shooting. Mary would have to find another husband," laughed the old man. And now, my girl, the round of beef, the pie, the cold chicken and ham. Sir Arthur Everton will sup with us to night—an honor we little ever expected to enjoy."

"Call me Ellis; secrecy is my object, and my name might slip inadvertently."

All acquiesced, and for the rest of the evening nothing was talked of but the plots and plans to overcome the common enemy, Charles Everton being cordially detested on all sides, especially since the strange death of his wife.

CHAPTER XLV.

SCOUT LODGE.

The residence of the head-keeper, who held his appointment under the will of the late baronet for life, was situated in a portion of a wooded, straggling forest, which abounded in trees of truly giant growth. The house itself nestled in a shaded nook, surrounded, close at hand, by trees of a smaller growth, and by a quickset hedge, which, with wires and spikes, served to keep out the hares and rabbits from a pretty and productive garden. About midnight, the supposed Ellis found himself at the porch with young Styles, Jim by name, who let himself in with a latch-key. It had been arranged that the young visitor should take the dress of a keeper, and as such act under the old man, who had unlimited power of selection. They entered the fine old kitchen, which served as parlor and reception-room, and Jim soon had a light ready. He then pointed out to the weary traveler a neat bed, with white sheets, in a kind of alcove, which, though regularly made like the others, had not been slept in since their daughter's marriage.

"You are tired, I dare say?" said the young man.

"I am dying with sleep and punch," replied the youth with a yawn of portentous character; and wishing the other a hearty good-night, he closed the communication between the rooms, and was soon in a heavy, dreamless slumber.

Jim imitated him, but that he rose betimes in the morning, took a turn in the forest, and re-entered the house just as his mother was preparing breakfast. His father, as usual, was smoking in the garden, but came in at a sign from his son.

"A clean cloth, mother, and the best of everything. You have a visitor to breakfast."

"Law, Jim! who can that be? not that forward hussy, Mary," cried Mrs. Styles, who was somewhat jealous of her future daughter-in-law.

"Don't call my wife that is to be, a hussy," replied the boy, laughing; "but it is not her. Your visitor is no other than—mind, it is a great secret—Sir Arthur Everton, our noble young master!"

"Good gracious me!—Heaven save us!" were the simultaneous cries of the old man and woman.

"There is no time for explanations. He is hiding from his step-father, but not for long. Hush! I will explain presently. Can I do anything for you, sir?"

"Water and towels," said a musical voice.

The old people stood amazed, but did not lose their presence of mind. Before the youthful master of Everton came forth, a rich and bountiful breakfast was prepared, during the consumption of which explanations were given. Old Styles heard with awe and terror. He knew the fierce temper of the step-father, and, until the rights of the young master were secured, advised him to be cautious. After breakfast he was clothed in a keeper's suit, his hands and face dirtied, and every precaution taken against betrayal. This done, and promising to return to dinner, young Arthur strolled into the wood; those woods so dear to him when, as a boy, he wandered in them their prospective master. He could recollect when it was hand in hand with that noble father who had been so soon forgotten by a good but weak-minded mother. Every nook was familiar, and sometimes he fancied that even the old deer knew him as they sniffed the air on his passage. Perfectly safe for the present from detection, he went where he listed, exciting some comment as a stranger from certain Gipsies and poachers who eyed him with no great favor. His friend, young Styles, strolled out with him after dinner to show him some of the spots which were less familiar to his wanderings. They were fine, stalwart youths, handsome and powerfully made. A very notorious band of Gipsies was located on a small down lying between the warren and the deer-park. Upon these Styles kept his eye most knowingly, as, in common with many others of his class, he had a great dislike of the Romany race. It is a wonder, indeed, how, with so much prejudice against them, the race has survived at all. Since their appearance in 1417, some three hundred strong, on the banks of the Elbe, ragged, dirty, and larcenous, they have been persecuted. The great majority of this very party were hanged. Hanged by the Hanse Towns, by the Swiss, by the Saxons, the Bavarians, it has always been a mystery how they have survived. Strange fact, wherever they have been treated with silent contempt, as in England, they are nearly extinct. Where they were scourged until the blood came, where their nostrils were torn with hot pincers, where the women were burnt alive, they increased and multiplied. When Styles and his companion, Ellis, as we must call him, came upon the Gipsy camp, they were busy cooking their afternoon meal. A stalwart body of men, armed with sticks and staves, were they; while women old and women young, children and crone crowded round. A dead silence fell upon them as they recognized young Styles, between whom and the Gipsies, for some reason or other, there was a serious feud.

"Your cauldron is pretty full," said the young keeper, sneeringly. "I hope none of my master's game has found its way into the pot."

"The birds of the air and the dark-fleshed beasts of the field—not your cooped-up animals, with blood as cold as their feathers—are as much ours as any other man's, no matter what your laws may say. But the Gipsies touch not the goods of those who shelter them——"

"So the farmyards suffer, I suppose——"

"Duck the young bantam!" said one of the juveniles, speaking in the Romany dialect, which they rightly judged to be unknown to Styles.

"Silence! no such foolish talk, if you would keep in with the master of Everton!" said our hero, in the very purest Romany.

Silence fell upon all. Man, woman, and child looked at the speaker with awe. A whisper passed, and then, with profound respect, they all saluted him.

"A fine brood of poachers you are encouraging, Sir Arthur!" said the young keeper, laughing.

"There is plenty for both. I have been more than once befriended by Gipsies. I will always find a corner for the men and women of the tribe," said Arthur, earnestly, quite unaware that one of the party was following him at a distance.

Two days passed, during which he had twice written to Monk, but had heard nothing. On the third he was stalking through an avenue, when he heard the trotting of a horse and behind a tree. Not a moment too soon, for there was Sir Charles, as he called himself, riding in hot haste to the Hall, followed by a groom. Arthur felt that the final contest had begun, and that a terrible battle was to be fought between himself and his step-father. As soon as the pseudo-baronet had passed, Arthur turned away, to find himself confronted by a Gipsy boy, who looked at him keenly and curiously.

"The new keeper's man?" said the swarthy looking youth, in a low tone,

"I am," replied Arthur rather gruffly, to keep up his character; "what are you doing so near the preserves, my man?"

"I have no weapon—I have no nets, and the path is open to all. Even the master, the cruel house-dweller could not object to me breathing the free air under the forest-trees," said the other.

"No poaching, mind," observed the supposed keeper, and turned away.

A low, musical laugh, half sorrowful, half amused, made him look once more at the boy.

"Don't you know me?"

"Zelah, my dear girl, what is the meaning of this disguise," cried Arthur, taking both her hands in his.

The girl blushed deeply. She did not care to explain how deep were her feelings towards him, and how she had adopted this rather bold way of repelling the advances of the youth of her tribe.

"I am freer thus," she said. "I can roam where I please without fear of insult. But you—why are you here in disguise? and why is yonder dark and mysterious man the master of Everton?"

"They say that I am a stranger, a false and impudent impostor. You, at least, knew me at once," said Arthur, bitterly.

"I did. There is no disguise which the eye of affection cannot penetrate—nay, perhaps the eye of hate. But if they call you an impostor, why do they seek your life?"

"Seek my life?" cried the other.

"Ay; come into the woods, and I will explain. If we are seen together, I am lost."

And the disguised girl drew him away beneath the leafy arches of the forest. Then she entered a low avenue of trees, until it apparently ended in a dense thicket of briars, a way through which was with difficulty obtained. When, however, they had traversed this impediment, they found themselves upon the edge of a pond, surrounded on all sides by thick foliage, except where, by means of an axe, a small square space had been cleared. Upon this was erected a hut of no inconsiderable dimensions.

"My home," said the girl, with a sad smile; "but I am not alone."

And she entered, pointing to where, on a low couch, lay an aged women, the chief of her tribe, old Meg. But she was sick and bed-ridden now, and merely moved her eyes languidly as he entered. She evidently disapproved of the visit of a forest keeper. The girl stooped and whispered something in her ear. Even the sallow, parchment-like face of the aged crone relaxed into a smile.

"His father," she whispered, in Romany, "was a kind friend to tent-dwellers. He is as welcome as the flowers in May."

Arthur here recognised the chief of the Gipsies—the queen whom he had so often seen in his younger days. He seated himself, after a kindly word or two to the old woman, near the opening of the tent, beside the girl, whose face was much changed. Two years had added to her beauty, but had given her a sad expression, which spoke of some secret sorrow. After a few words of friendly greeting, the girl explained that a party of Gipsies, many of whom were strangers to the district, had the night before received a sudden addition to their number in the persons of Pharaoh, the Patterer, Namish, and a swarthy house-dweller, of whom she knew nothing. She, the Gipsy girl, had watched them, and, despite their caution, had overheard a portion of their plans. They were evil ones, she knew, and were connected with himself. The arrival of Sir Charles Everton at the house was probably connected with the plot. Had they, then, already traced him to the neighborhood of his father's halls? If so, the detective had betrayed them, and was an emissary of the enemy. At all events, after a long and confidential conference, Arthur made up his mind to keep close, except at night. On the girl, if on no one else, he could depend. Just as this decision was come to, there was a slight movement in the bushes close at hand. Before, however, Arthur could spring to his feet, the intruder had leaped to the mouth of the tent. It was Jocko, the monkey, who after being completely tamed by his half-wild mistress had at once recognized his master.

CHAPTER XLVI.

OPEN HOUSE.

By the death of his wife, and the supposed death of his step-son, Sir Charles Everton had gained a high and lofty position in the county. He was richer than any save one nobleman, and quite young enough to take to himself another bride. The announcement, therefore, that he had returned to Everton Hall, had cast off his mourning, and intended to entertain his equals, was received with loud satisfaction. His character was not of the highest; but what will not a rent-roll conceal? Besides, he was a widower, still handsome, not at all old, and therefore still a most eligible parti. Lady Winkthorp, a distant relative, undertook to act as mistress of the house, so that all the proprieties were consulted. It was announced that the house would, at a certain date be filled by as many guests as it could conveniently hold, when balls dinner parties, and receptions would follow in quick succession. But one thing amazed all comers, and excited the county most warmly. The new prima donna of the Theatre Royal, Belgravia, the season being over, had accepted an invitation to come down as one of the guests. This was not welcome news. Middle-aged gentlemen with very large fortunes are apt to please themselves in the choice of a wife; and it was more than probable that this beautiful and accomplished woman might prove a most dangerous rival. But though many threatened to keep away because of this circumstance, when it came to a pinch, none did. Helena de Napoli did not come down until the day of the first ball, and came quite in state, with such an array of luggage as to promise a long stay, and with servants enough for a moderate princess—a secretary, a companion, and a lady's-maid. The secretary and companion, however, to all appearance foreigners, were humble people, and once installed in the apartments of the prima donna, they remained there, never intruding themselves upon the master of the house or his guests. The assembly was a brilliant one, and it was when the company were nearly all collected that the actress appeared, simply but elegantly dressed, and with a mien as gentle and unassuming as to win nearly all hearts. Above all her extreme youth won upon those who had been prepared to hate and shun her. She was introduced to Lady Winkthorp by a lady of rank she had known in London, and at once mixed with the guests with ease and elegance. Some she knew, to a pinch, none did. Above all her extreme youth won upon those who had been prepared to hate and shun her. She was introduced to Lady Winkthorp by a lady of rank she had known in London, and at once mixed with the guests with ease and elegance. Some she knew, to a pinch, none did. Helena de Napoli behaved with great tact and discretion. He had made up his mind that this lovely flower should be the new mistress of his home and heart and he wished neither to scare her nor to arouse the vigilance of his guests by any marked attention. He walked through one quadrille with her, and then retired for some time to the card-room. A fine, noble mansion indeed was Everton Hall, and the prima donna was much struck with its grandeur. Every portion of it was thrown open, and she found herself wandering about in admiration. Much as she had traveled, she had never before seen a splendid English home in the country. It was probably a feeling of curiosity, therefore, which made her slip away at last to the picture-gallery, which, though lighted up, was deserted for rooms more convenient for dancing, flirtation, and so on. It was a splendid room, with six windows, looking out upon a terrace. Slowly and earnestly the enthusiastic girl walked along, gazing at the family portraits and other pictures which adorned the walls. One picture arrested her attention particularly. It was that of a boy of fourteen, leaning on the neck of a pony, and was a startling likeness of Arthur Everton. She stood looking at it with a glance of sweet and ineffable affection.

"Forgive me," she said, half aloud, "if I appear deceptive. My heart is true and steadfast."

And she walked away towards an open window, which led to a terrace overlooking the park. The night was lovely in the extreme; a crescent moon hung over meadow and forest; a soft mild wind alone stirred the bushes on the terrace. The prima donna stepped to where she could overlook the pleasant scene.

"One word," said a voice that thrilled to her very heart. "Are you alone?"

"Alone—yes, for a moment."

A light figure leaped over the balustrade, and stood beside her. The dress was rather a contrast to that of her own, being coarse and rude, but it did not prevent their embracing.

"Oh, my darling!" said the stranger, "I have some stupendous—some awful news to tell you! I am trembling with horror as I speak!"

"Hush!—away! In the garden at eight?" replied the lady.

The other leaped over the stone balustrade, and disappeared, just as the master of the house came hurriedly out of the window.

"Fair lady," he cried, "how is this? Why have you deserted us? and why do I find you alone and unattended—you, who should be the queen of the ball?"

"It was," said the prima donna, with a ringing laugh, "our pleasure to be alone. We had been admiring the picture-gallery, and came forth to cool our royal brow."

The baronet bowed low, and, offering his arm, led the lovely and agitated girl back to the mansion. Nothing further occurred worthy of record that evening, except that when she retired to her own apartments she eagerly embraced both her secretary and companion, asking them to excuse her further attendance, as she wished to rise almost with the lark. It was not far from eight, however, when the prima donna tripped down the garden, passed through the gate, and hurried across the open ground that separated it from the Chase. Here she found the supposed young keeper, pale, livid, and stern. His gun was clenched in his hand with a fierce and nervous grasp.

"What is the matter?" asked the prima donna, in her most caressing manner.

"Matter!—murder is the matter! Oh! that I had never gone abroad! Listen. I have been conversing with Silent Death, the old sexton, and an old nurse, and they intimate that my mother's death was not natural. A strange doctor, strange nurses and a hurried funeral, under pretence of a contagious disease——"

"But surely they must be mistaken," cried the young girl. "The idea is too horrible to be believed!"

"It shall be probed to the bitter end. I have communicated with Flint, who I find is honest, and stated my suspicions in full; but I must have other witnesses—other persons present, to support me."

"You shall!" cried the prima donna. "But hush! we are observed! I saw some one move in the bushes yonder!"

Arthur turned, and without a moment's reflection, fired in the direction where he saw the bushes moving. A yell of savage pain and desperation followed, and then all was still. After a short conference, during which the young man loaded his gun, the young girl, fearful that the shot, which had evidently frightened somebody, might arouse the house, hurriedly returned, to be ready for breakfast. Arthur darted away into the bush, but, except a few fallen leaves stained with blood, and the mark of shot on a tree, he could make out nothing. By winding paths known to few, he made the best of his way to the hut where the Gipsy girl awaited him. She had been on the track, and knew the sleuth-hound who had followed on the trail of the young master, and who had hobbled away with a fresh subject for vengeance—a fresh link in the chain of revenge. It was Pharaoh. As long as the vindictive cripple was allowed to be at large, the life of the young heir of Everton Hall would be in danger. Arthur determined, as soon as he had secured the greater villain, to take measures to remove the crawling Gipsy serpent from his path. The day was passed in seclusion, and towards dusk the new young helper, always guided by the supposed Gipsy, made his way to the house of the head game-keeper, where he found the old people at home very anxious about him. They, however, allowed that their residence had been watched, and that his absence during the night had been wise. When Arthur explained that he had slept in the Queen of the Gipsies' tent, and that her great grand-daughter was his guide, it was with great difficulty that they kept down their indignation. The natural antipathy between the game-keeper and the Gipsy could not but show itself. As soon as he was satisfied that the people of the fidelity of the girl, and of the inestimable service she had been to him.

"Strange," said the old man "that to all true Everton hearts the Romany is ever faithful. Hush! some one comes."

And Arthur passed behind the great screen in the kitchen. Monk entered hurriedly, and Arthur at once came out to meet him. Retiring into a corner, they held a long conference, which ended in Monk not returning to the Hall, but going to London by the stage-coach. Arthur found that he must wait days before his doubts could be solved. But there was no help for it. Meanwhile so great was the infatuation of Charles Everton with regard to the young girl upon whom his somewhat mature affections had fallen, that everything else was neglected. Acting with less discretion than upon the first, he was her cavalier, her right hand on all occasions. Rides, pic-nics, everything was made subordinate to her wishes. On several occasions his agents, Pharaoh, Namish, and the Patterer, thrust themselves in his way, but he waved them off. His mind was fixed upon one idea: how to win this beautiful and charming girl. It is true that she did nothing, said nothing to induce any doubt of his success. When, however, he appeared to approach the question too nearly, she contrived to evade the subject coquettishly, and to draw others into the discussion. All this only added to his fierce determination.

"AN AQUATIC PIC-NIC—GOING WITH THE TIDE."

CHAPTER XLVII.

THE SEARCH IN THE VAULTS.

Meanwhile, Arthur Everton remained on the rack. In addition to his other causes of restlessness and doubt, he had the additional horror infused into his mind of believing that his mother had been poisoned—murdered by her cruel and ambitious husband. His very soul revolted at the reflection, and all ideas of love, happiness and ambition vanished into thin air as he contemplated this fearful contingency. Though he knew that the matter must occupy some time before it could be duly investigated, he could devote his mind to no other thoughts. The London coach, with passengers from the distant railway stations, passed about an hour after dark through the village. It had been arranged between Monk and Arthur that whenever the hour came, the former should make a sign to his young friend on passing the crossed-road before they came to the hamlet. Under a tree, deep in the shade, Arthur placed himself every night at the agreed hour, with the gipsy girl as a kind of scout. And every night the old coach lumbered by without making any sign. On the evening of the seventh, however, as Arthur stood in the gloaming, leaning on his rifle, the coach came lumbering up, and the youth saw the window down on his side, and a red pocket-handkerchief rather ostentatiously displayed. He drew back, whispered a few words to the Gipsy girl, and stood back in the thickening gloom. The Gipsy girl still retaining her boy's costume, moved off at a rapid pace, while Arthur, his heart beating with wild and convulsive throes, walked slowly in the direction of the churchyard. He was about to fathom the dread secret which had left him sleepless, mad, anxious, for now ten weary days; but, well aware of the character of the foes he had around him, he in no way departed from his most extreme caution. His hand was on the hammer of his gun, and his eyes cast about in every direction in the full expectation of being assailed by those of whose presence, thanks to the Gipsy girl, he was aware. Slowly, his feet almost dragging him backwards, he advanced in the direction of the churchyard. When in sight of Silent Death's cottage, he waited. The old man's light was visible, his door being open, and Arthur even fancied that he could smell the odor of his pipe. Once or twice the low moan of the dog was audible. But no strange footstep on this occasion woke the silence of the night. Presently, however, he made out a group of persons in dark habiliments approaching the cemetery. But Arthur remained still until they reached the hut of the sexton. A low, cautious whistle summoned him, and in another moment he was in their midst. The sexton was ready with lantern and keys. Not a word was spoken, even the glide of the lantern being kept closed until they reached the church. Silent Death cautiously opened the heavy door leading to the vaults, and led the way in. Having closed the door, he placed the lamp on the shelf, where it was least likely to give any sign to those without, and stood on one side reverently. The persons present were the Rector of the parish, two eminent medical men, Septimus Flint, the detective, and his assistant, the sexton, the retired butler, Monk, our hero, and the Gipsy guide.

"The young gentleman," said the Rector, looking with intense interest at the supposed game-keeper, "is I am led to believe, Sir Arthur Everton?"

"I am," replied the youth, in a hushed voice.

"And, from matters you have heard, you wish the coffin of your mother to be opened, the body to be exhumed and examined?"

"I do."

"And here is the Secretary of State's warrant," said Septimus Flint, with professional coolness.

The Rector took the document, glanced at it, and then showed it to the two medical men. Both nodded, and, when the signal was given, followed to the family vault. The door swung on its heavy hinges, the earthy perfume of the grave filled the outer cellar, and then all entered. Arthur, with his inseparable companion, the supposed Gipsy boy, retreated to a corner where there was a kind of stone bench, on which they seated themselves. Silent Death and the detective's assistant undertook the painful task of opening the coffin. With the tools they possessed, it was not a work of any length of time. The coffin lid was removed.

"Powers of evil and darkness!" cried Monk, who had bent forward eagerly, "what does this mean? Death!—there is no body here!"

All rushed forward, and it was clear to every eye that the coffin was empty.

"What," gasped Arthur, "does this mean? Why have stones, and straw, and bricks been allowed to desecrate the vault of the Evertons?"

"Because," chuckled the sexton, "your mother lives!—never was dead!"

A dread silence fell upon all.

"A crime—a fearful crime," said Monk, "has been committed! Gentlemen, friends—all, I need not ask your strict and rigid silence. This horrible sacrilege must be inquired into—exposed!"

"Close the vaults," replied the Rector, with a dry cough; "this is even more than I expected. Come quietly to my house, and there we can talk the matter over."

Nobody sentient voice was heard. Half an hour later all save the detective's assistant, Death, and the Gipsy girl, were seated in the reverend gentleman's study. Sherry, port, and other liquors were placed before them to drive out the cold and damp night air. Then the Rector spoke. And what was Sir Charles Everton, baronet, doing all this time? He was on the garden terrace of the Hall with a large party. He himself was beside the prima donna in conversation. Down in the depths of the valley below could be seen the church and churchyard. It was past midnight.

"Do people usually visit the vaults of the parish at this hour?" said the prima donna, carelessly.

"No. Why?" gasped the baronet.

"Because I saw lights a minute or two ago," continued the actress.

"Impossible!—out of the question?" said the other, in a hollow tone, gazing out at the black darkness of the night.

"What I saw, I saw!" was the cold reply. "I hate haunted houses and churches. Eh!"—with a pretty shudder—"another sight of corpse-candles will be enough for me!"

And the prima donna turned to re-enter the house.

CHAPTER XLVIII.

THE CONFERENCE, AND ITS RESULTS.

The Rector of the parish, who had known Arthur's father, and had been an intimate friend of the lady, was brief in his words. The false funeral, an act of sacrilege of itself disgraceful, was not so arranged without some object of more than common interest. Either the poor lady had been poisoned, and the body made away with for some strange and inexplicable reason, or—and to this idea the Rector opined—she was alive.

"Heavens! my mother living—a prisoner in a lunatic asylum!" cried Arthur, in the excitement of manner.

"My dear young friend," urged the clergyman, "you must be calm. This is a terrible trial, and must be met with calmness and decision. Probably your mother was too positive a witness in your favor; and, having got rid, as he believed, of the son, he was compelled to seclude the mother, in order to destroy her evidence."

"My opinion, sir," observed the detective, "the question only remains—where? Let the poor lady only be found, and we shall have no difficulty with the false claimant."

This opinion coinciding with that of all present, a few words settled the affair. The medical men, whose work was temporarily at an end, retired to rest; the detective waited for the night, making an appointment with Arthur for the next night. Arthur himself, declining all other hospitality, left the house with the sexton and the Gipsy girl. He felt himself safer in the woods than in any house, with such enemies as those around him. Besides, he required the free air to expand his chest, and the canopy of heaven, under which to think of the stupendous discovery he was on the verge of making. Little slumber came to his eyes that night; but towards dawn he slept heavily. The Gipsy girl forbore to wake him, so that the sun was midway in the heavens when he started for the Hall, in the hope of meeting the prima donna. As usual, he wended his way through narrow and sinuous paths, which in his childhood's hour had been strangely familiar to him. They took him through the warren and out into the chase. About half way was a beautiful series of fish ponds, on one of which was a boat-house. It was skirted by a very dense wood, and through this Arthur slowly made his way. Just before he reached the extreme end of the lake, and where were seats and a covered shed for skaters in the winter time, he heard voices. Stealthily, slowly and with as much caution as a red Indian, he trod now, for the tones were familiar to him.

"I tell you," said Sir Charles Everton, in a stern and angry voice, "that I will not be driven mad in this way! The young impostor must be found. I have promised you the means of independence for life, and you say that you cannot find him."

"He's artful, he is. He's in the woods, I know, for he peppered Pharaoh with small-shot," said the Patterer, with a chuckle; "but it's my opinion, all the old servants is playing his game. They sticks together like wax."

"Ah! is it so? Fool that I was not to rid myself of the time-serving lot! But four men such as you should not be fooled by a stripling!" cried the baronet.

"He is, I believe, befriended by some of the Romany tribe. A girl whom he stole from Pharaoh—who will only be too glad to cut his throat—is said to be hanging about watching us. Only let me catch her, that's all!"

"Tell me nothing—reveal none of your secrets," said Everton, "only do my bidding."

"I will; never played false yet. But, master, rum thing last night at the church."

"What?" gasped the other.

"Rector, and doctors, and sexton, and a whole lot, went down to the vaults about midnight. I was in the churchyard a-watching old Death, who is one of the friends of the boy."

"Well—well? Speak, man! Keep me not on the rack!"

"They all went down to the vaults, where they stayed an hour. I heard them at work—breaking open a coffin, I think."

"Heaven have mercy!" screamed the horrified baronet. "What can this mean? Go on; drive me not mad!"

The Patterer could only add that, after fastening up the vaults, the whole party had gone to the Rectory.

"Ruin!—destruction!" cried Sir Charles. "Man, the boy must be found to-day. This is some of his confounded meddling! Hunt him down, secure him, and I double your reward. I must away now. Meet me near the stable at dark. I may have other work for you!"

And the alarmed evil-doer hastily parted from his companion, and hurried towards the house. The Patterer, with a cold sneer upon his face, turned in the direction of the water, where Namish, concealed behind some bushes, awaited him.

"The house-dweller is in the toils. If you would be sure of the money, we must be quick," said the Gipsy. Pharaoh is on the track of Zelah. Before night she will be removed."

Arthur's heart bounded within him. The faithful girl who had done so much for him was in danger. His visit to Everton Hall was not immediately necessary; he must go in the evening. In the meantime he would put Zelah on her guard. With this view he for some time followed the two men, who hurried through the plantations and dark fir-wood at a rapid pace, until they came to the ruins of a hut, formerly used by keepers to watch at night for poachers. Here sat Pharaoh smoking a pipe and brooding over his revenge. Arthur was close to them, had even passed ahead of them, but paused to listen.

"Have you seen her?" the Patterer asked.

"Yes; she and the young coxen passed the night in old Meg's tent," was the fierce and savage reply.

"But you must not touch old Meg," said the Gipsy, in a tone of alarm.

"Not I. But I will wring her neck. She was to be my wife before she saw the coxen; and now he is everything, and I am scorned as the worm beneath her feet. Come!"

And he seized his crutches, taking his way directly towards the tent of the old Queen of the Gipsies. The others followed. Light as a deer, his feet scarcely appearing to touch the ground, Arthur flew through the woods, and soon reached the dark pool, exhausted and out of breath. In two minutes he had explained to the bewildered girl the cause of his sudden return. The old woman, by a sudden exertion of strength, sat up in her bed.

"Go," said she; "leave them to me. Hide in the Old Glen."

Arthur took the Gipsy girl by the hand and drew her away into the deepest solitude of the wood towards a dell known as the Old Glen.

"They will murder you," said the faithful girl, her bright eyes suffused with tears. "Pharaoh is a bad and cruel man,—and yet, perhaps, I had better be his wife."

"My girl," cried Arthur, "why?"

"He might forgive you. As long as he is on your track you will never have hope or rest."

"Marry that wretch?—never!" said the youth, with a proud smile that went to the girl's heart.

But no selfish thought animated her bosom. She knew well that he loved another, and that she was to him only a humble friend. She was one of those devoted creatures who could worship from afar, without hope of any return save gratitude. Meanwhile, Pharaoh had hobbled up to the tent on his crutches, followed by Namish and the Patterer. Pharaoh approached the tent, and peered in.

"What seek you?" said the awful voice of the ancient, almost dying woman. "Outcast from your tribe, there is blood in those false eyes! You would do murder."

"I seek my own. Your grand-daughter was given to me by my tribe. Where is she who was to be my wife?"

Safe from you. A traitor who sold one who had broken bread and ate salt with him can be no match for my race. Go back whence you came—slave, to toil of the cruel house-dweller, your day, your hour is at hand!"

"Silence with this folly! Am I a silly coxem to believe your old wife predictions?" cried Pharaoh, blustering to hide his fears. "Once more where is Zelah?"

"You laugh at my warning!" said the old woman, raising her eyes on high. "Hear him blaspheme, oh stars! But go! When the bane dog barks then shall you know that the time has arrived."

TO CORRESPONDENTS.

☞ We never answer questions by mail. All addressed to us seeking information will be answered through this column only.

S. A. T., Boston, Mass.—You are in error. The CLIPPER was right in waiting until Miss Terrene Dix produced a drama adapted by the late N. B. Clarke from Ainsworth's historical romance was produced with great splendor Feb. 18th, 1856, at the Broadway Theatre, and enjoyed a run of eighteen nights. It was produced at the Bowery, in Jan. 1866, and we have reported it twice to better than memory. The cast at the Broadway was as follows:—Herne, James Carroll; Henry VIII, Harcourt; Richmond, Fenno; Surrey, Grosvenor; Lynwood, Charles Fisher; Shoreditch, W. A. Chapman; Wolf, Mr. Bowers; Anne Boleyn, Miss Gerald; Jane, W. Buckland; Mabel, Mme. Ponial; Janette, Mrs. Seymour. Our answer to "Central Park" in our issue of June 8th, was in response to the query, but correct furnish any of the other volumes.

D. W. K., Philadelphia.—The rent is kept by the proprietors a business secret, but we are informed by one who ought to know, that $21,000 are the figures.

1. The Boston. 2. Ditto. 3. The Mutual. 4. The Boston. 5. The Cleveland. 6. The Boston. 7. The Athletics. 8. Boston. 9. Boston. 10. Boston.

F. S. W., Utica, N. Y.—There is no rule in cocking which treats on it, but the correct way to measure is from the point of blade in a straight line to the inside top of the socket.

CHARLES W. H.—B having but one to go to C's three, he (B) went out of the game. Now, as the point therefor is taken before either Jack or game.

FOND DU LAC, Wis.—Either in billiards or base ball the challengers have no rights over the challenged, except adherence to the rules of the regularly organized game.

B. AND P., Boston, Mass.—We know of no one who would undertake to train the dogs, and if they did you could not, probably, perform them. Shipping train costs a lot these days.

C. M. ALLEN, Baltimore.—Each club in the championship arena has to play five games with every other club, and the most games won takes the pennant.

J. M. P., Chicago.—The trial of Lew Baker for the murder of Bill Poole was published in book form, and can be obtained of R. M. De Witt, 33 Rose street, this city. 2. It cannot be obtained.

H. W.—The fastest time for one mile in this country is 1:43, made by both Salina and Fadladeen at Lexington, Ky., Spring Meeting, 1871. There is no official time record of English racing.

J. W. R., Ottawa.—In all pools sold on running races in the United States, if a horse does not start, the buyer or seller of such horse received the whole pool.

LOUISE, Natchez, Miss.—The "Last Rose of Summer" was introduced in the opera of "Martha," and is not a part of the original score.

K. D. AND G. W. K., Philadelphia.—A player can order his partner to turn down the trump and go it alone himself. He takes the responsibility of the trump, and can therefore play it alone.

ATHLETIC, Philadelphia.—Goldsmith Maid's best recorded trotting time is 2:17, made at Milwaukie, Wis., Sept. 16th, 1871. Dexter's fastest time is 2:17¼, made at Buffalo, Aug. 14th, 1867.

D. S., Frankford, Pa.—There are two exhibitions known as Mc-Keever's Enlightening, or Wing Ching Chinese Circus, now on Long Island. A letter addressed in care of this office will reach either.

IDLEWILD, New Orleans.—1. Goldsmith Maid has made the fastest time on record for one mile. 2. A having one point to go, and turning up Jack, wins the game.

C. C., Attica, Ind.—Unless you declare to play the "call out" game, the cards must be played out before the score is taken. If both players count out, then the game is a draw.

JACK PIERCE, Savannah, Ga.—The style of your broken Dutch lyrics is not very clear; we may look them over again, however, and, if admissible, give one.

J. K.—1. Only the time of the winning horse goes on the record. 2. Dexter did not win a heat in his race with Ethan Allen and running mate, and consequently has no record.

C. P. T.—The late Walter Brown never rowed for the championship of England. His only race there was with Wm. Sadler, a third rate man, whom he defeated easily.

BELFERGON.—1. We have not heard of the "Flying Farinia" for some time, and cannot say. 2. Address Frederick Ledger, editor and proprietor of the Era, London, England.

CUPPLE, Cleveland, O.—Surgeons sometimes cure children so afflicted, but grown people are, in the majority of cases, incurable.

READER, Brooklyn, L. I.—If you peruse our variety summary weekly you will see where they are.

OLD READER, Clinton, Iowa.—They can be addressed in care of this office.

WM. G.—That is strictly a private matter, and such questions we never answer.

DOCTOR, Troy, N. Y.—In the case of a tie for game at all fours, the non dealer is entitled to the point.

L. L., Baltimore, Md.—Except in that they advertise, we don't know enough about either party to give an opinion.

KANSAS CITY, Mo.—1. The name was illegible to which you requested answer. 2. We have a correspondent in your city.

DON BROWNE.—Miss Jennie Lee is in this city, but we never publish the private addresses of lady professionals.

ADVANCE AGENT, Cincinnati, O.—Send to T. Allston Brown, 71a Broadway, for "Showman's Guide."

D. D. D.—The Athletic has been defeated oftener by the Mutuals than the Boston Club has.

SPORTSMAN, Hartford, Ct.—London, Eng., exceeds in population any other city in the world.

DEXTER, Detroit.—The best time on record in running bases is by Berthrong, of Washington, in 9 seconds.

GAY, Chicago.—Not in 1869. In 1870 they beat the Reds one game by a score of 42 to 5. In that year they lost six games.

SPORTSMAN, Shelbyville, Ind.—Send to Frank Queen for red ball to which his was frozen in making the shot, the carom was foul.

C. L., Selma Varieties.—A letter addressed in care of this office will reach him. He has no circus.

READER, Chicago.—The father of the Cleveland nine, is the identical Charley Faber of the old Union Nine, of Morrisania.

PARKER'S LANDING, Va.—B wins, as the best jump made by Bob Wall is 19 ft. 11in.

A SUBSCRIBER, Baltimore.—You will find the names of all the nines of 1869, '70, '71 and '72 in "De Witt's Base Ball Guide."

L. C. S., Boston.—1. Mr. Bonner paid $35,000 for DEXTER. 2. He bought him of Mr. Geo. A. Fawcett.

QUINDARO, Sumter, S. C.—You are wrong; your hand must be shown to the board, if so demanded.

M. G.—Formosa won the Doncaster St. Leger in 1868, the year Blue Gown won the Derby.

BOSTON.—The player on the left next the dealer is the only one that can lead, under any circumstances.

ORY.—At casino, no one point takes precedence over another, as at all fours.

H. C. W., AND W. L. H., Topeka.—At seven-up, the non-dealer scores game in the event of a tie.

R. R. W., St. Louis, Mo.—1. W. A. Wray was lost on the Evening Star. His wife is still alive. 2. No.

B. A. C.—1. That is his right name. 2. George L. Fox has black hair. 3. Cannot say.

CONSTANT READER.—From $20 to $40 per week, according to ability and reputation.

E. L. E.—Thank you, but our reportorial ranks are sufficiently recruited.

A PUGILIST, Boston.—Hyer and Sullivan fought in February, 1849.

Monday opened early with a shower of rain, but it cleared off by noon, though the weather looked threatening. The result of the two games in Baltimore and Philadelphia on Saturday deprived the contest of Monday of much of the interest that would otherwise have attached to it; but, nevertheless, some 4,000 persons were there to witness it.

THE GAME.

Theo. Bomeisler called "play" at 3 P. M., the Mutuals being sent to the bat. They were disposed of in one, two, three order, and the Bostons also failed to score, though Geo. Wright reached his base. In the second innings it was one, two, three on both sides, a goose egg for each club. In the third innings Boston, in their third innings a good hit by Rogers led to one run being scored on the Boston side, the Mutuals being again whitewashed, with two men on earned bases.

In the fourth innings base hits by Start and Bechtel, assisted by fielding errors, enabled the Mutes to secure an unearned run, and in the fifth innings the same batsmen again earned bases, on which they scored by an error of Hatfield's, making a blank on their side scored a run after this until the eighth innings, when the Bostons got one in by two bad throws, thus tieing the Mutual score—2 all.

In the ninth innings both were blanked, and the Mutuals closed their tenth innings with the score at 2 to 2. On the Boston side, on this innings, but for an error of the umpire's, would have been the end of the game. The facts were as follows:—Schaffer led off with a base hit, made his second by a bad throw in by Bechtel, and after Rogers had been caught out, Harry Wright was given four unearned balls, two of which also being called on him. Geo. Wright then hit a hot one to Boyd, who failed to hold the ball, and Schaffer reached his third safely, as did George his first. But one man was out when Barnes hit to Hatfield, who first touched Wright and then passed the ball to Start, Schaffer touching the home base before Start held the ball. Had there been two hands out when the ball was struck, the run could not have counted; as it was, Umpire Bomeisler ruled that the run did not count in that case, if the run is scored before the third hand is out it counts. The umpire did not see it in time and so decided. The score is not recorded.

In the tenth innings, and in this innings the Boston scored an earned run on three base hits, a two baser by Schafer giving the winning run. Rain fell during the game, but not heavy enough to stop play. The score below gives further details.

ATHLETIC vs. MUTUAL.

On Saturday, the 8th inst., the ball ground at 25th and Jefferson streets, Philadelphia, was visited by upwards of seven thousand persons, the attraction being the contest for the championship record between the Athletics of that city, and the Mutuals, of New York. The first game, played the preceding Saturday, will long be remembered as one of the finest contests on record, the Athletics, although they made three less clean hits, only able to score two runs, so fine was the fielding of their opponents, while the Mutuals, although they made three less clean hits, yet added three runs, and thus obtained a coveted victory by a majority of one. The umpire was delighted on the 8th, Robert Ferguson, of the Atlantic, of Brooklyn, had previously been agreed upon as umpire, and the game commenced punctually at half past three o'clock. The Athletics were first at the bat, and after a short delay Meyerle, the side being put out by good fly-catches by McMullen, Pearce and Eggler. Start and Bechtel went out in succession to first base. Flowers and Fisler fielding the ball. Hicks, after hitting for a couple of foul tips, one of which Anson might have had but for the crowd—was given his base on called balls, but was forced out at second by Boyd's hit to Flowers, and the seventh blank was scored for the Athletics.

In the Mutuals now made a change in their pitchers, McMullin relieving Cummings. Fisler was caught on a tip bound by Hicks; Treacy made two bases by a fine left field hit; Anson followed with a grounder to second, and both runners were thus enabled to get home superfluous. It isn't likely that either man can row five miles within three minutes of that time. Scharff has since been made a perfect hero of by his too many admirers, and not a few look upon him not only as a wonder but the best and fastest champion sculler of America. Time will tell. The latest challenge received were David Carle and William Coates; for Butler, Chas. Bunten and Stephen D. Salmon.

A CHALLENGE FOR ANOTHER RACE.

Attributing the defeat of their man to other causes than superiority on the part of his opponent, the members of the West End Club are anxious to effect another match for him with Billy, and to that end send us the following challenge, which will doubtless be accepted by the McKeelites:—

BOSTON, June 8th, 1872.

EDITOR N. Y. CLIPPER.—DEAR SIR.—We hereby challenge the McKee Barge Club to match their representative, Mr. Wm. Scharff, against Mr. T. C. Butler, of our club, we not being satisfied with the result of the last contest. The race to be rowed any time after July 4th. If the McKee Club will forward articles we will sign immediately. Respectfully, CHAS. V. HUNTER,

For the West End Boat Club.

ANNUAL CLASS RACES AT BROWN UNIVERSITY.

The annual class races came off on Saturday, the 8th inst., on the Seekonk course, Providence, R. I., all four classes entering crews as follows:—

Class of '72.—Hendricks, stroke; Barber, Judah, Jennings, Kellen, Caldwell, bow.

Class of '73.—G. W. Browne, stroke; Russell, Carrington, Stratton, Blake, McLellan, bow.

Class of '74.—Cornet, stroke; Gallup, Reehy, Case, Lincoln, Sayles, bow.

Class of '75.—Brown, stroke; Hopkins, Fields, Noyes, Ashmore, Bogert, bow.

The course was for a turning race, mile and a half and back, and the prizes were a set of silver goblets to the winning crew, and a set of silver cups to the second, each class putting in an entry fee, to make up a purse for the prizes. Positions were drawn in the following order:—'74 inside, '73 No. 2, '75 No. 3, and '72 outside. The start was made just before twelve o'clock, '74 getting away first, followed closely by '73, '72 and '75, not a way evenly, but '72 gaining a little, attempted to cross '73's bow and fouled them. After separating they got away well together, and so continued, neck and neck, to the stake, which '74 reached first, but made a rather long turn, '73 following closely and turning finely, but too far beyond the stake. The others came along from six to eight lengths behind, and turned about together, '75 having the inside, but making the poorest turn. The same relative positions were maintained coming home, '73 laboring hard to close the gap, but failed to do so, and they passed the home stake in the following order:—'74, in 21 min. 50 sec.; '73, in 22 min. 17 sec.; '75, in 23 min. 7 sec.; '72, in 25 min. 36 sec.

The water was in good condition and the time excellent, particularly as neither of the crews were in very good racing trim, and the stake was acknowledged by all parties to have been between one and two hundred feet beyond its usual position. Chas. M. Smith, captain of the Narragansett Boat Club, was referee and starter; Messrs. E. H. Luther, '73; J. M. Duane, '72, and C. Hitchcock, '73, judges at the home stake, while C. C. Luther, '71, and Geo. T. Brown, '73, were the judges at the turning stake.

The crew of '75 makes a favorable show for the Freshman races at the inter-collegiate regatta, and with steady work can put themselves into a condition that will augur well for their success. The stroke is particularly good and only needs judicious practice to develop a fine oar-man. Regarding the University crew, the prospect is not so encouraging. Quite a number of the college oarsmen have been hard at work during the winter in the gymnasium, but a series of unfortunate circumstances have deprived them of their captain and one or more of their most reliable men; so that some doubt is entertained of Brown's sending a University crew this season. No crew is picked as yet, and it is feared that, there being some dissensions among the gentlemen regarding important positions, regarding will be. We trust, however, to see all differences reconciled, and a University crew make its appearance with the rest at the annual college regatta.

THE SCHUYLKILL AMATEUR REGATTA.

During the current week the National Amateur Regatta, gotten up under the auspices of the Schuylkill navy, will take place on the Schuylkill river, at Philadelphia, and there is every indication at present that it will prove a very interesting affair. Next week the Couper Club, of Savannah, Ga., and the Nassau Club, of this city, arrived at Philadelphia. The Coupers, who are the guests of the Couper Club, intend rowing in the four-oar shell and four-oar gig races. For the latter they have brought with them a cypress canoe, hollowed out of a single log, and said to be very fast. This is the first boat of the kind that has ever been seen on the Schuylkill, and it excites a great deal of attention among the boating men. They have also a paper four-oar shell, built by Waters, Balch & Co., Troy, N. Y. The Nassaus have been taken in charge of by the Undine Club, and took with them a four-oar and a pair-oar shell. Josh Ward is their instructor in the way of preparation. On account of the great number of entries for the four-oar shell race, it will be necessary, in order to avoid fouls and insure a fairness to all, to row this race in two trial heats and a final heat, making a time-table that has been agreed upon, subject, however, to changes in the hours in case any races are not pulled by reason of withdrawals:—Thursday, June 13th.—3 P. M., four-oar shells, first trial heat; 4 P. M., four oar shells, second trial heat; 5 P. M., double scull shells; 6 P. M., four oar shells, final heat; 7 P. M., gunwale barges. Friday, June 14th.—3 P. M., four oar gigs; 4 P. M., single shells; 5.30 P. M., pair oar shells. All of the races, with the exception of the single shell race, will be started from anchored stakeboats at Columbia bridge, and will be rowed around stakeboats placed just below the Falls bridge, and return; distance three miles. The single shell race, which is for five miles, will be started from the Falls bridge, to row around stakeboats anchored just above the Junction Railroad bridge, and return. An umpire, judge, starter, and time keeper have been selected, but the names will not be announced until it is ascertained whether the gentlemen will serve.

THE FRIENDSHIP BOAT CLUB, of this city, purpose holding their third annual pic-nic at Jones' Wood, on Tuesday, 11th inst., when also they intend presenting a handsome gold medal to the winner of a single scull race for amateurs to take place on that day. Of course, a merry day and jovial time generally is anticipated by the members and their friends. The officers are M. S. Farrel, president; C. A. Luther, vice president; J. S. Murray, recording secretary; H. D. McCullough, corresponding secretary; M. J. Murray, treasurer; N. M. Hughes, captain.

HENRY COULTER is said to have weighed 178 lbs. on the day of the pair-oared race with the Biglins, and some of his townsmen condemned him in unmeasured terms for neglect in training. It is stated to have been his inability to keep up his side which caused their boat to swerve from its proper course. It is said that he has entered for the scull race at the Buffalo, N. Y., regatta, in July, and will take part in other single scull regattas during the season. May he have better luck than heretofore.

JOHN MIREHOUSE, commander of the steamship City of London, has addressed a letter to George Roahr, in which he expresses surprise at the statements made in the published communication of the latter, and says that the officers of said vessel, one and all, deny having promised to do as he (Roahr) asserted with the Atalanta racing shell.

BILL SMITH, of the Jones CLUB, has accepted the challenge issued by his defeated antagonist, Ed. Powell, of the Columbian Club, and will row three miles, for $500 a side or more, on the Upper Monongahela course, Pittsburgh. A meeting was to have been held on the 10th inst.

MR. W. HARRY HYATT, formerly Commodore of the Philadelphia Yacht Club, and once upon a time as clever a trigger artist as most of 'em, arrived in the metropolis on the 8th inst. from the City of Quakers and Scrappel. He combines business with pleasure in his visit to Gotham.

GEORGE BROWN, of Halifax, N. S., matched to row Robert Fulton, of St. John, N. B., in July, has two new shells one built by Judge Elliott, of Greenpoint, L. I., and the other by Robt. Jewett, of Dunston, Eng.

FRED. PACK, of the Howard Club, is anxious for a race with Adam Schaures, of the Duquesne Club, of Pittsburgh, and has accordingly challenged him to row three miles, on the Allegheny, for $50 a side.

A FOUR-OARED RACE between crews captained by Tobe Meyers and F. Buesing, for $100 a side, is to take place on the Monocacy river, at Frederick, Md., on the 23d inst.

LEW CAVITT HAS, we learn, been invited to join a crew now being formed by the Biglins. He will probably accept.

THE RING.

JOHNNY AARON'S MATINEE.—Owing to the races or some other cause, the benefit for Johnny Aaron at Harry Hill's on the 6th inst. was far from being up to the mark or what that clever boxer was entitled to. The fact of Johnny sparring so often with Barney recently in this city and Brooklyn, certainly didn't help matters, however much he thought it might. The boxing was unusually good and so was the general show, barring a few tedious waits at the beginning. The stage manager, Roberts, in his philosophical coat, which, like Greeley's, seemed adapted to all weathers, to keep out the heat as well as the cold, was most energetic, and Tovee did his part in his peculiar and unalterable way. George Siler and Charley Cannon opened fire in a give and take encounter of thumb sprainers and nose enders. Sparring Edwards and Patsy Hogan had another rough bout, but not satisfied with a mauling, Warry undertook to bring Paddy to the floor, ending in getting thrown himself. Here a rush of enthusiasm, swelled into a volley of cheers, greeted the well known old times jig dancer, Micky Warren, as he appeared on the boards, which lasted some time. Order being restored, Tovee introduced him, adding that Micky Bird saved his life in Cincinnati, and he couldn't forget that. A familiar old jig tune was struck up, and the shuffle and double shuffle followed, the motions and time being up to Mickey's old style, so good that he had to repeat. Chambers and Seddons had one of their usual brilliant and interesting sets-to to oblige. Paddy Hogan and Mickey Coburn also had a hot bout of it, Mickey's respiratory organs being somewhat the worse for wear before the finish. Harry Hill here stepped out and said how Dooney Harris was in the room, prepared to indulge in a light set-to with anybody which drew out the stalwart Brooklyn champion, Johnny Dwyer, and we venture to say that Dooney hasn't fit and it so ho for many a day. Johnny's youth and strength against Dooney's age and somewhat affected constitution, were too many by long odds to offset, and while he got there pretty often the stage was too small to prevent Dwyer getting home some upper cuts and teeth loosenors. There were other things, singing, dancing and such like, including a volunteer from the "Blonde Brigade" in a straight jig and a Dooney turned and turned finely, but Johnny, finally faced the crowd and gave one of their mirth-provoking, excellent displays of all that goes to made a sparring match amusing and exciting, and the Johnny Aaron matinee was over.

COLLINS VS. THE UNKNOWN.—There is now every likelihood of the match talked of for sometime past, between Tim Collins and Scrappel Seddons being made, the articles of which may be either himself or another man being made. On the 8th inst., we received a century from Collins to cover a deposit of like amount left a few days before by George. In the note accompanying the money Tim requested Seddons to forward articles of agreement to him, he preferring that method to coming in person all the way from the Hub to make the match. On Monday, the 10th, the stakes were posted in the Sun and Newark dropped in to learn if anything had been heard from the Bostonian, and appeared much gratified upon being informed that Tim had "come down with the dust." He thereupon had articles drawn up, proposing to fight for either $500 or $1,000 a side, about half-way between this city and Boston, at 124 lbs., to weigh on the morning of fighting, Wednesday, August 14th. These were signed by Seddons on behalf of the Unknown, and forwarded to Collins' address on the 10th, accompanied by a note requesting him to sign and return them without delay. We do not see what Tim can find objectionable in the document; so that if he is as willing for a go in the P. R. as Father side, a match will be made in short order.

MACE AND HIS TRAINERS ON THE PACIFIC SLOPE.—Jim Mace, Pooley Mace and Billy Edwards, whose departure from this city for California, shortly after the making of the match between Jim and Neg O'Baldwin, was duly announced, arrived at San Francisco on May 24th, and met with a cordial reception. Tommy Chandler and other sporting men of that city meeting them at the ferry-boat dock and escorting them to the Lick House, where they put up during their stay. Shortly after their arrival they appeared at the San Francisco Circus, where they were still performing at last advices, June 2d. Jim commenced with his Grecian Statues, and afterwards appeared in a scientific exhibition with Pooley, while Edwards put on the mits with Dennis Haley and other local boxers of repute, the engagement of the trio serving to pack the circus at each of the afternoon and evening performances.

JACK MILLER, formerly of Manchester, Eng., who arrived here a short time ago, will be the recipient of a complimentary testimonial at Chambers & Seddons' Arbor, No. 30 West Houston street, on Saturday evening, June 15th. Jack is well known in the pugilistic circles of Britain, having fought several times himself and seconded Arthur Chambers in a number of different battles. He also backed Arthur for his mill with Dick Goodwin (spring-heeled Dick), which ended in a draw, after fighting 16 rounds in 2 hours and 30 minutes, February 19, 1867. The bills announce that the send-up will be given by Miller and Sam Hurst, the Staleybridge Infant.

HI DAY is said to have won a fight for $100 a side at Shushan, N. Y., on June 4th, knocking his opponent, Joe Allen, out of time in the seventh round. C. N. Button acted as referee, while Ed. Casey and Jerome Bliss, second and boy, his antagonist being waited upon by Jack Sullivan and Eph Coon. They are said to have been rematched for a larger stake, the mill to come off in July.

CHANGED HIS NAME.—Harry Hill has moved his country seat from Bloomingdale to Jackson avenue, Long Island, near the Fashion Course, where he intends to open a road house as well as continue the horse racing business. Harry's New York property was taken by the city, for improvements, at a good figure, and he is talking up his residence near Long Island seagirt shore. He has acres now, where he had only lots before.

BOB SMITH took a "bon." at the Arbor on June 8th, the sole to bang as follows:—Chambers' Moore and Thompson, Donohue and Maudsley, Sullivan and friend, Flynn and Maddan, Barclay Brothers, Omaha and the Moore, Warry Edwards and Sealey; Dooney Harris and Smith in the wind-up, which was excellent.

ANOTHER SPORTING DRUM.—Geo. Seddons has taken a cosy in Newark, N. J., on the corner of Market and Lawrence streets, where he himself or his partner, Arthur Chambers, calculates to be on hand for business from this on.

AMEN.—Sam Hurst has been laid up for some time with rheumatism, in Frankfort, Pa., unable to get about at all. This is bad for Sam.

SHOOTING FOR MONEY.—At Tinicum, Pa., on June 6th, two pigeon-shooting matches were contested. The first was between Waddell and Mayer, at 10 singles each, for $25 a side. Tieing on seven, they shot off at five singles, Waddell killing 4 to 2. The second was between Sam Marion and Martin, at 7 singles each, the former scoring 4 to 3.

WM. GARSON AND MILES JOHNSON are to shoot a match at 30 yards a-piece, for $50 a side, against A. H. Regardus and Martin, at Suffolk Park, Philadelphia, on the afternoon of Thursday, 13th inst.

THE TURF.

JEROME PARK RACES CONTINUED.

THIRD DAY, SATURDAY, JUNE 8TH.

MILE HEATS, TWO THREE YEAR OLD COLTS, FIVE MILE AND THREE-QUARTER DASH; HARRY BASSETT AND WHITEHORSE OUT, AND LOCHIEL THE FAVORITE CHASE.

Despite the threatening appearance of the weather on the morning of Saturday, the fears entertained of another postponement of the racing were not realized, for long before mid-day the sun broke out clear and bright. The attraction of seeing the renowned Harry Bassett contending against the fleet-footed Kentucky horse, Lyttleton, in the Westchester Cup, was irresistible, and resulted in the gathering of thousands of ladies and gentlemen, the rich and brilliant costumes of the former adding beauty and grace to the scene, and representative surfaces from nearly every state of the Union were present.

The opening race, for three year olds dash of a mile and a quarter, was won by Mr. Sanford's colt Nate, a son of imported Australian and Maggy Gratz. The dash by the same gentleman to public in this race. He looked rather light in flesh, but pulled over his two opponents, Elsie and Margin, all the way, and when that clever artist in the saddle, Hayward, gave him his head, he shot away from them, and won handily. Mr. Sanford rides admirably strongly, although he has untried, and seat such a large competition as to the market to back him that he succeeded Elsie (who, on the strength of the victories of her friends in the Ladies' Stakes, had been installed the favorite) before the race commenced. The winner's a big, racing-like colt, and was purchased at Mr. Alexander's sale in 1870, by Mr. Sanford for $700. He is engaged in the Jersey Derby, Monmouth Cup, Continental Hotel and Robbins' Stakes at Long Branch, and the Dixie Stakes at Baltimore.

The mile and three-quarters dash, carrying 100 lbs. each, had five runners, of which four had distinguished themselves by their previous performances. These were Ortolan, the winner of the Pordham stakes on the previous day of the meeting; Frank Hampton, who had won several races at the New Orleans meeting this spring in remarkably fast time; Tubman, a last year's winner, and Frogtown, who at Lexington distinguished himself by running a mile and a quarter in 2:09¼, and a mile and three-quarters in 3:07, the fastest times on record at the best distance. The other horse was Tom Boston, who won two races in moderate company last year, but has no business in running with the class of horses he here met with. Ortolan and Frogtown made the running, with Tubman and Frank Hampton in waiting for a mile and a half, when the former fell back beaten, and Tubman, shooting to the front, had all his horses safe, and won easily; Frank Hampton being second and Frogtown third, a close race showed that the distance was too far for Ortolan, or that the heavy ground did not suit him.

The Westchester Cup was reduced to a match between Harry Bassett and Littleton; the latter being brought from Long Branch by old John Harper to get the measure of Col. McDaniels' horse for Longfellow. The veteran Kentuckian believed that he could beat the eastern crack with his son of Leamington and Fanny Holton, for a few days before he accepted a bet from Mr. McGee of $200 to $100 on the race. Had he waited until the day, he could have got much longer odds, as $1,000 to $300 went begging, and even longer odds were laid. There was little knowledge gained by the Longfellow division of Harry Bassett's merits, for he was never extended at any part of the race, but making the running throughout at what really appeared to be only an exercising gallop for him, he never allowed Littleton to get beyond his saddle girths, and won easily by half a length.

The hurdle race afforded another heavy blow to the western stables, for from Blind Tom's performances in the south, in that jumping business, it was believed Mr. Jennings would be partially compensated for Cape Race's defeat in the Belmont stakes. He, however, was beaten by a novice in Lochiel, a son of Bonnie Scotland, trained by Wyndham Walden and artistically ridden by William Midgely, confessedly the best of our cross-country riders. Lochiel was purchased as a yearling by Mr. John Coffey, but never having been properly trained, he was unsuccessful on the flat, and was sold to his present owner for $1,000. He has evidently found his proper vocation, for he is a splendid jumper and has a fair turn of speed also. The defeat of Blind Tom (who is named after the musician, and not on account of any defect in his vision) shows that the western and southern horses have not accustomed to the changes of climate, water, etc., they have had to endure. They will assuredly show better form during the campaign than they have hitherto.

THE FIRST RACE

was for three year olds, for a purse of $500, with the entrance money to the second horse; a dash of a mile and three-quarters. The entries were Hubbard, Margin, Elsie and Mate. Col. McDaniels refused to start Hubbard, because he had to carry a penalty of 3 lbs., which he deemed unjust. In his absence, Elsie was made the betting, that he because the first choice, the pools selling as under:—

Elsie	$220	$220	$330	$400	$250	$235
Australian Colt	280	305	338	405	230	270
Margin	65	65	70	125	65	75
Totals	$565	$590	$732	$970	$545	$580

Elsie made the running, with Mate in the rear, until going around the club house bluff, where Margin took across the track and fell into the rear. Entering the homestretch, Mate challenged Elsie for the lead, passed her, and won the race, hard held, by a length, in 3:23¾, Margin half a dozen lengths behind Elsie. Summary:—

JEROME PARK, N. Y.—SPRING MEETING, AMERICAN JOCKEY CLUB.—THIRD DAY, June 8th.—FIRST RACE.—Purse $500—for three-year olds. Five per cent. entrance money to the second horse. Winners of $500 to carry three pounds extra; of $1,000 five pounds; of the Ladies' Stakes seven pounds; of the Belmont Stakes ten pounds extra. A dash of a mile and a quarter.

Time, 2:23¾.

THE SECOND RACE

was for a purse of $600, for all ages, to carry 100 lbs.; one mile and three-quarters. The starters were Tubman, Ortolan, Frogtown, Tom Boston and Frank Hampton. They were sold in pools as follows:—

Ortolan	$200	$510	$500	$710	$600	$510	$400
Frank Hampton	125	450	568	410	400
Frogtown	90	230	320	300	290	580	830
Tubman	125	155	270	300	300
Tom Boston	40	100	80	50	50
Totals	$580	$1,445	$1,735	$1,770	$1,630	1,090	$930

Ortolan, with Frank Hampton second, and Tom Boston third, cut out the work, Frogtown and Tubman last. On the lower stretch Frogtown took second place, and raced with Ortolan for the lead, while Frank Hampton and Tubman waited patiently in the rear until after passing the stand. Then the upper turn Tubman took third place, and Frank Hampton also moved up as they went around the bluff. Coming in sight after circling the hill Tubman was seen in front, with Frogtown second, Frank Hampton next, while Ortolan, killed by the heavy ground and the pace, had fallen back beaten. Frogtown soon after gave way, and the race was left to Tubman and Frank Hampton, the former never being headed, and winning under a strong pull by two lengths; Frank Hampton second, Ortolan fourth, and Tom Boston last. Summary:—

SAME DAY.—SECOND RACE.—Purse, $600; for all ages; 5 per cent. entrance money to second horse; to carry 100 lbs.; a dash of a mile and three quarters.

THE WESTCHESTER CUP,

a sweepstakes of $50 each, p p, with $1,500 added, the second horse to receive $500 out of the stakes, two miles and a quarter, had twelve entries, of which only two, Harry Bassett and Lyttleton, came to the post. Lyttleton stands credited with having run a two mile heat in 3:34½, the fastest on record, and, in consequence, it was thought by many he would give the invincible northern crack a close race. The pools sold thus:—

Harry Bassett	$300	$500	$950	$1,050	$850	$310
Lyttleton	50	50	100	150	110	60
Totals	$350	$550	$1,050	$1,200	$760	$360

The race admits of little description, for Harry Bassett took the lead when the flag fell, and, although he allowed Lyttleton to reach his saddle girths, he never permitted him to get any further, and, without ever having to fairly extend himself, won under a strong pull, by half a length, in 4:18¾.

THE HURDLE RACE,

for a purse of $400, with $100 out of it for second horse, had eight entries and six runners—A. Taylor's The Earl and Dickson, Jenning's Blind Tom, Tully's Vesuvius, Coffin & Lawrence's Lochiel, and Thompson's Nickajack. Pools sold as follows:—

Blind Tom	$200	$640	$650	$210
Taylor	100	60	490	370	$330	$510
Lochiel	110	620	320	305

Nickajack	85	170	60	40
Totals	$655	$2,390	$1,800	$995	$1,040	$1,200

The race was confined to Blind Tom and Lochiel, none of the others getting within hailing distance of them. Blind Tom, who jumped a heavy one. The two Aaronites, Barney and Johnny, finally faced the crowd and gave one of their mirth-provoking, excellent displays of all that goes to made a sparring match amusing and exciting, and the Johnny Aaron matinee was over.

COLLINS VS. THE UNKNOWN.—There is now every likelihood of the match talked of for sometime past, between Tim Collins and Scrappel Seddons being made, the articles of which may be either himself or another man being made. GOLDSMITH MAID vs. LUCY.

These celebrated belles of the trotting turf contended for a purse of $3,500, mile heats, best three in five, in harness, at Suffolk Park, Philadelphia, Pa., on Friday, June 7th, about three thousand persons congregating to witness the struggle, albeit the weather was far from favorable. The judges were Messrs Chas. Lloyd, J. R. Butterworth, and J. F. Beale. Goldsmith Maid was driven by Bud Doble, and had the pole. Lucy was driven by B. C. Hickok, and took the outside station. Both horses were in splendid condition, and were admirably managed.

First Heat.—A fine start was made, the Maid leading a little. A fair lap was made before the first quarter pole was made, after which the race was almost neck and neck throughout, the horses coming down the home-stretch very nearly even. The Maid won the heat by half a length. Time, 1:22¾.

Second Heat.—The horses got away almost even, and they continued close until the last quarter, when the Maid got away from her partner, winning the heat by fully four lengths. Time, 1:23¼.

Third Heat.—Two unsuccessful attempts were made for a start. At the third trial the animals were nearly even, and the word "go" was given. For the first and second quarters the horses struggled together, nearly lapping. At the third quarter the Maid dashed ahead, leaving her partner about a length behind. At the home-stretch Lucy caught up so as to lap, but clipped a little on the track, and the Maid won the heat and race by five and a half lengths. Time, 2:23¾. Summary:

Mr. Doble stated to the judges that on June 12th, by request of Mr. W. W. Bair, proprietor of the park, a race had been arranged between Lucy, to a wagon, and Jay Gould, to harness. He also stated that he would run Maid with a running mate, and that he hoped to make his mile in 2:17. The rain fell in torrents during the race, and at one time threatened to put a sudden stop to it.

BEACON PARK, BOSTON, SPRING TROTTING MEETING.

FIRST DAY, TUESDAY, JUNE 4.

The Beacon Park Club Spring trotting commenced on Tuesday, June 4th, in the presence of a large assemblage. The day was remarkably pleasant and the track in fine order. The first trot was for 2:35 horses for a purse of $400, divided into $400, $250 and $150, for first, second and third horses. Six started, viz:—Phil. Sheridan, Bristol Bill, Fannie, Royal Mike, Atlantic and Black Prince. Phil. Sheridan was so hot—a hot favorite—that he was at last left out in the cold, and then Bristol Bill was taken at 7 to 1 against the field. The knowing ones were right, for Phil. Sheridan won in three straight heats and Bristol Bill took second money. Summary:—

BEACON PARK, June 4th.—Race for horses that have never trotted better than 2:35; $400 to the first horse, $250 to second, and $150 to third; mile heats, best 3 in 5, in harness.

THE GRAND PRIZE OF PARIS.

A telegram from Paris, France, states that the great event of the racing season there—the contest for the Prize of Paris—was decided on Sunday, May 26th, at the Longchamps course, and attracted an unusually large number of visitors from England. The race was won easily by Cremorne, the winner of the Derby, who came in two lengths ahead of Barbillon; Rubens was third, and Phlegethon fourth. Summary:—

GRAND PRIZE OF PARIS, an object of art, and 100,000 francs, for entire colts and fillies foaled in 1869, of every description and country, added to a sweepstakes of 1,000 francs each, colts to carry 126 pounds and fillies 119 pounds; one mile and a quarter.

THE LONG BRANCH RACES.—In another column will be found the advertisement of the two race meetings to be held at Monmouth Park in July and August next. The first meeting lasts five days, commencing on Saturday, July 20th, and concluding over Tuesday, Wednesday, Thursday and Friday, the 23d, 24, 25th, and 26th of July. On the opening day there is a steeple chase, a mile dash, and the Jersey Derby. The latter for three year olds, which closed with 41 nominations. On the second day there is the Hopeful Stakes for two year olds, with 36 entries; a mile heat race, and the Monmouth Cup, with 12 entries, including such renowned racers as Harry Bassett, Longfellow, Army and Monarchist. On the third day we have a steeple chase; a selling race; the Monmouth Oaks for three year old fillies, with 35 entries, and the Monmouth Hotel Stakes for four year olds, with 13 entries. On the fourth day there is the July Stakes for two year olds, 23 entries; a mile heat race, and mile and a half dash for beaten horses. The last day winds up with a hurdle race; the Monmouth Regent Stakes, 24 entries, and a three mile dash. Next week we shall review the prospects of the horses engaged in the different stakes at this meeting.

TROTTING AT TOLEDO, O.—Two trots were decided at Toledo, O., on the 1st inst., quite a large number of rarities and others having been present. Summaries:—

RANDOM SHOTS.

FIRED OFF FOR THE NEW YORK CLIPPER,
BY J. J. GRANT

"TWO IN THE MORNING."

Distressfully groaning, his sad fate bemoaning.
Upon the hard pavement a jolly boy lay,
His ruffled locks tearing, discouraged, de-pairing,
No kind chum to give him a lift on his way.

"O dread inebriety! sinful society!
Were I renounce ye, the past I bemoan!
O, sad predilection! O, horrid conviction—
Policeman, I pray, leave that bottle alone!"

OVER TAXED.

"My birdie, of what are you thinking?
My precious, you look very sad—
Hush, there now, don't say I've been drinking—
No, darling, indeed I'm not mad!"

"Oh, husband, you're very provoking.
Your wits are as blunt as an axe;
I was thinking—now, darling, no joking—
Of that dreadful old revenue tax."

DRAW.

Draw yourself up like a man, sir;
Draw wisdom from sorrow, but ne'er
Draw hasty conclusions; you can, sir,
Draw mildly, with justice and care.

Draw breath 'gainst no man as a hater;
Draw sword 'gainst no man, but in lieu,
Draw cuts with your foe—I say, waiter,
Draw lager—we lager for two.

"DO YOU REMEMBER:—"

How once when pleasure's advocates were rife
To wage with Melancholy in eager strife,
We quick approached, depriving of their cheer
The festive crowd by beaming off their beer?

THE RICHMOND, VA., THEATRE.

WRITTEN FOR THE NEW YORK CLIPPER,
BY. J. B. RENAULD.

CONCLUDED.

The earliest records to which access can be had show that on Nov. 9th, 1848, the Richmond, Va., Theatre was opened by John Sefton, on which occasion he made his first appearance in that city. His company was composed of Messrs. Stark, leading; Sefton, Bellamy, Proctor, Cooper, Meyer, Chippendale, Jr.; Lingard, heavy; Tor, Coomes, Meyer, Chippendale, Jr.; Lingard, heavy; Byer and McNesbitt; Mesdames Cramer, heavy; Kate Horn, leading; Meyer, the Misses Ludlow, Carpenter and Bishop. The opening bill consisted of "Sweethearts and Wives," and "Catching an Heiress." Mr. Phillips was prompter; Gilbert, property man; Munder, machinist, and Monsieur Penot, from the French Opera, New York, leader of orchestra. The receipts amounted to $209.50. Nov. 11th, first appearance on any stage of Miss Chippendale, daughter of the celebrated comedian, who enacted Letitia Hardy in "Belle's Stratagem." Nov. 15th, debut of Miss Kate Frances as Eliza in "Paul Pry," and re-appearance of T. Placide, the latter playing forty nights at a total sum of $555, or at an average of $138.75 per night. The first opera company was "Chaste Salute," as an afterpiece. Monday, Nov. 27th, first appearance of the Ravel Family, who played for half receipts, eleven performances. The total sum taken at the ticket office during their engagement was $2,786.98. Dec. 11th, first time in Richmond of John Sefton as Jemmy Twitcher. Dec. 18th, first appearance of Mr. Ryder, from Macready, who played four nights (with His engagement was one of the most successful in Richmond, averaging $474.83 per night. On the 3d day of Jan. following he appeared as Shylock for a farewell benefit, when the proceeds amounted to $761.75. Dec. 25th, Mrs. Farren opened to $74.50 business. Jan. 9th, engagement of Isabella Dickinson. Jan. 20th, Mrs. Seguin's English Opera Troupe. Feb. 5th, debut in Richmond of Mr. and Mrs. James Wallack, Jr., for six nights, to poor business, averaging only $36.50 per night. Feb. 12th, the Wallacks and John Sefton, for the latter's benefit, in "Golden Farmer," to a $342.63 house. Feb. 14th, first appearance of Mr. and Mrs. Chas. Howard (the latter now Mrs. Harry Watkins) and Chas. Burke, comedians. Feb. 28th and 29th, Mr. Hackett as Falstaff for three nights, with the following receipts:—$256.87, $311, $162. March 7th and 8th, two Dime concerts by Mme. Anna Bishop to an average of $304. March 20th, advent of the Bedouin Arabs. April 9th, engagement of Miss Julia Dean for six nights to total receipts amounting to $1,273.60. Saturday, April 21st, last night of the season and benefit of John Sefton, manager, to $230 proceeds. During the interval preceding the season of 1849-50, the theatre was occupied by the dansieuses Mlle. Ravel Family; Herr Alexander, the magician, and the Nightingale Ethiopian Serenaders, the latter of which were immensely popular, and included the names of H. K. Johnson, M. W. White and George Kunkel, and also by Madame Biscaccianti and M. Strakosch's concert company.

Encouraged by the last season's success, John Sefton re-opened the theatre on Monday, Dec. 10th, 1849, with a new company, embracing Messrs. Bradshaw, leading, Lingard, H. B. Phillips and Sloan, and M'mes Melinda Jones, Sefton and Sloan, together with Miss Celeste, and Mr. Thorn as scenic artist. Monday, Dec. 31st, Messrs. John Sefton and W. H. Chippendale assumed joint management. The latter made his first appearance in Richmond, as an actor, on Jan. 21st, 1850. Jan. 8th M. Hield was added to the company. About that time the fairy was seen in the "Realities of the Passions," was not a dramatic success unprecedented in Richmond then. On Feb. 21st the theatre was jammed with strangers, who had come to the city to witness the laying of the corner stone of the Washington monument. Feb. 25th, first night of Mr. Charles John Pitt, who appeared in a round of Shakespeare's plays, to good business. A $150 house was considered a good one in those days, and the records show such nightly receipts as $37.10, $48.80, and $42.50. On the 25th of March Miss Celeste made her debut in a speaking character, on the occasion of John Sefton's benefit. On the 30th "Rip Van Winkle" was performed for the first time in Richmond, with C. Burke in the title role. April 1st Mr. J. B. Booth, Sr., was to appear as Richard III.," but failed to do so on account of severe indisposition, though the local press gave the cause of his absence in harsher terms. The management refused his services on the following day. A $400 house was present to greet him. On April 22d the managers closed business after a season of 118 nights—the total receipts amounting to $18,022.98, or an average of $155.37 per night.

The season of 1850-51 was inaugurated by manager J. S. Potter, who presented a strong company. Messrs. C. H. Moorehouse, C. W. Walcott, John Sloan, J. H. Oliver, W. H. Thompson, A. H. Josephs, C. W. Taylor, M. S. Phillips, C. Phillips, R. Marshall, Collins, Evans, McAller; Mmes. Melinda Jones, J. Sloan, R. Marshall, Bonsall, Ness, the Misses C. Clarke, Miller, and M'Carill, composed the company. The season opened on Monday, 23d inst., with Chas. Kemble Mason as star, the play being "The Wife," but on account of the absence of Mr. Moorehouse, the initial performance was postponed till the 22d, when "Hunchback" was given. Mr. M. A. Chapman and Mr. J. A. Joseph were added to the company on the 23d; also, soon after, Mr. and Mrs. Duff were engaged. Nov. 12th, Mrs. H. Lewis appeared for six nights, followed by Miss Caroline Chapman, the latter making his first appearance before a Richmond audience on Monday, Dec. 2d, personating Richelieu, Claude Melnotte, Mose and Jemmy Twitcher, to first-rate business, after which Mrs. Potter fulfilled an engagement of six evenings. On the 20th of December the theatre was used by Mlle. Jenny Lind, who, assisted by Signor Belletti and Mr. Jos. Burke, gave a concert. A glance at the attractions offered that season were the following artists:—Mlle. Blangy, danseuse; Wm. Don, baronet, and Mrs. Stephens, who gave five performances to crowded houses; Mr. Graham and Miss Richardson, C. Burke, Miss Kate Krischman, and Mr. J. H. Oliver (two local debutantes); J. S. Silsbee, Yankee comedian; Mrs. Farren and W. Marshall; Mr. Neafie, American tragedian; Anna Bishop, Teresa Parodi, assisted by Signora Julia Bennati and Signor and Signora Tedesco. Mr. J. B. Booth, assisted by his son Edwin Booth, opened in the "Apostate," the father playing Pescara and the son Hemeya. In the "Iron Chest," Edwin played Wilford to his father's Sir Edward. The season closed in the early part of May, 1851. During that season, Mr. New, the treasurer of the establishment, died.

Mr. Potter opened the theatre for the next season on Sept. 29th, 1851, to a $144.37 house. His company was good. The Parisian Ballet Troupe was the first attraction offered, and was followed by Wilmarth Waller, who played six nights to a total amount of $699.38. Monday, Oct. 13th, no performance. The company struck for wages, but there was not money enough to pay the debts of the previous week; there was great excitement in the theatre. Funds were raised, debts liquidated, and a representation given; proceeds, $95.38. Friday, Oct. 17th, renewed excitement, gas turned off on account of non-payment of bill; the same paid and gas on at 7½ P. M. Oct. 30th. Maretzek's Italian Opera opened in "Norma" to $699.50. Played six nights; admission, $2 50. Nov. 17th, after unsuccessful business, J. S. Potter relinquished the management, when W. L. Maule became lessee, and presented Mr. Neafie, and engaged J. G. Cartlich for stage manager. Dec. 16th, appearance of Geo. H. Barrett and his daughter.

The season of 1852-53 brought Messrs. Taylor & Clarke as lessees, who introduced to their patrons the sisters Susan and Kate Denin. The following seasons, till 1859, were void of much extraordinary attraction. During the season of 1859-60, Edwin Booth appeared in conjunction with his brother, John Wilkes, in "Richard III," Edwin playing Duke of Gloucester, and John W., Richmond. Jan. 12th, 1859, engagement of Mrs. Anna Cora Mowatt for eleven nights. Feb. 9th, Messrs. T. J. Worrell, S. E. Ryan, — Jackson and J. T. Fannin were added to the company, and G. V. Brooke made his bow to a Richmond audience, appearing six nights. Feb. 18th, Lola Montez appeared for the first time in Richmond, and remained only three nights, followed by J. E. Murdoch in "Hamlet" and nine other plays, after whom came Mr. and Mrs. Barney Williams.

The season of 1863-64 commenced on July 13th—in fact, the establishment had been closed—with Mr. E. F. Magill as manageress, and R. D. Ogden as acting and stage manager. The company was a very strong one, embracing such artists as Messrs. J. S. Charles, T. R. Duncan, F. M. Bates, J. Harrison, H. Guion, E. Banker, C. W. Clark, Miss Eliza Wren, Mrs. C. De Bar and the Partington Sisters. About Sept. 1st Miss Katie Estelle joined the company as leading lady.

Programmes were printed on the blank side of unused blanks or unaccepted job works. The paper was scarce to an alarming degree. That which was manufactured was of a brown color and of a poor quality. The "Virginia Cavalier," a southern military drama, the dramatis personæ divided in Confederates and Federals, was performed. Some of its principal tableaux were "Health to Ashby," "Ashby's Coal Black Charger" and "Washington's Grand March." On Jan. 18th Miss Eloise Bridges first appeared.

During the war the impossibility of getting "stars" left the theatre without extraordinary attractions, and compelled the manageress, Mrs. E. Magill, ably assisted by Mr. R. D. Ogden, to fight it out with a stock company. During that season, however, Mrs. Magill expended thousands of dollars in trying to get a company from England. In April, 1863, she engaged the services of J. F. Renault to visit Europe and secure a company. Success attended the enterprise until the company reached Norfolk, Va., in the following October, when the war proved too great an obstacle to the accomplishment of the project, and the company never reached Richmond, Va.

After the evacuation of the city by the confederate troops and its capture by the Union army, in 1865, the management, with a company embracing the names of W. H. Leake, J. M. Barron, E. H. Brink, J. Morton, A. Glassford, the Misses Annie Waite, C. Crystal, J. Warner, A. Dillingham, Blanche Middleton, M. Jackson and Mrs. C. De Bar, introduced several prominent "stars," among whom were E. Adams, Ida Vernon, Fanny B. Price and Charlotte Thompson. Immediately after the fall of the city, the theatre was opened by Mrs. Magill, at the request of the Union soldiers in Richmond, Maj. Gen. Terry at the head. The gas pipes having been cut by the retreating army, the management was obliged to light the theatre with candles. The sight presented by the dim lights was a sorry one. These lights were used for about two months. The theatre was closed about 1866, and was not re-opened till 1870, in September, by R. D. Ogden as lessee and manager. His company embraced such artists as the Misses Ida Vernon, Eliza Wren and Messrs. Ogden and E. B. Dalton. Eli Ogden was the business manager and J. B. Renauld treasurer. The season was not successful. Mr. Ogden retired from the management and the same was assumed by Mrs. Magill, the proprietress. The greatest part of Mr. Ogden's company, including Messrs. Dalton, Renauld, Whittaker and the Misses Sallie Partington and Blanche Renauld, traveled through the southern towns, while Mr. Ogden became the manager of the Sappho Burlesque Troupe.

The season of 1871-72, under the management of Mrs. W. T. Powell (formerly Mrs. E. Magill) was a success, as the weekly correspondence from Richmond, which appeared in the CLIPPER, showed.

Thanks are due to the management of the Richmond Theatre for the use of the records from which the greatest part of the above data were taken.

NEW DRAMAS.

The Whitsuntide holidays are usually productive of novelties in the English metropolis, and this year has not been behind its predecessors in this respect, as will be attested by the following narration of the plots of new pieces produced at different theatres:—

At the Victoria Palace, Horace Wigan's new drama of "Rag Fair" was produced on May 20th. It is an effectively arranged, telling and dramatic piece, with fun, characterization, and with many strong and dramatic situations. A lady, the Countess of Choumont, married the son of Sir Singleton Hawkwood, an affluent of the Pretender, since restored to favor at the opening of the story. Upon the death of her husband, who had been guilty of forgery, she, finding herself and child steeped in poverty, in order to redeem the evidence of his crime, then in the hands of a usurer, became a dealer in old clothes. By this means she supported her daughter, Julie Hawkwood, at the Convent of Bermondsey, and brought up her foster children, Oswald and Mary Trevor, at her shop, in Old Field Lane. Oswald she educated for the bar. At this time she became reconciled to her husband's father, Sir Singleton Hawkwood, under whose roof her daughter, Julie, meets a certain count, who is looked upon as an eligible suitor, but who is in reality none other than Jack Rann, the highwayman, who, having robbed and plundered the real count, assumes his name and person. Unfortunately for the count, his credentials are missing, having been stolen upon Bagshot Heath in transit. These papers the count is in search of, or rather the livery in which the papers were sewn. This livery is sold at the old clothes mart at public auction, and the bidding runs high, as several of the purchasers guess at the concealed value, among the rest, old Silas, the Jew money-lender. The coat is about to be knocked down to him, when Dame France appears upon the scene, and under the dictation of Brighside, the philanthrope of the piece, she secures it, amidst universal approbation. The dark side of the picture is formed by two ruffianly thieves, Brandon and Larcher, who, overhearing Dame France is about selling her business to the Jew, are on the look-out for the purchase money; by mistake, they murder the wrong woman, and, in consequence of some circumstantial evidence that transpires, Oswald Trevor is arrested for the crime at a ball at Putney, given in honor of his call to the bar. At this ball a terrestrial of reward is gotten up to present to Dame France, the Queen of Rag Fair, upon the event of her abdication, and by a lottery, it falls to Brandon's fate to read it. His manner of doing so gives to Brighside a hint of the true state of the case with regard to the murder. This clue he follows up, and with the assistance of Mary Trevor, who has, in the meantime, discovered the identity of Dame France with the countess, and that the woman who was murdered was the mother of the highwayman, brings the conscience-stricken Brandon to confess. An exciting scene takes place, the villain being utterly confounded by the apparition of the dead, who, in the shape of a head, retributively rolls on the table. Two characters which plus distant count, the stolen papers are proclaimed, and the Queen and Julie and Mary and Brighside are proclaimed, and the Queen of Rag Fair retires upon her laurels at the happy denouement.

"A commonplace chronicle," founded upon the late Claribel's celebrated ballad, "Strangers Yet," saw light for the first time at the Grecian on Whit-Monday. Mr. Oswald Allan, the author, has constructed on this foundation a stirring drama, with some good characters, and very original, perhaps, in all respects, but standing, nevertheless, very favorably in the above category. The foundation of the plot is an "old, old story," and tells of an elopement, leaving home in consequence of family matters, going abroad, marrying and having a child. His father, dying, commissions a younger brother, Marmaduke, to seek him out, and bring him to him a very lucrative business and estate. Marmaduke, however, who has a son named Irving, feels that if the property is given up he will lose his portion. He has, accordingly, his brother murdered, his nephew in the meanwhile escaping death in India, and being brought to England by the man hired to commit the murder. This rascal is subsequently seized for a robbery and transported, while the child becomes a waif, and is dealt with out by John Gabb and his wife. In course of time the waif, Blanc Ferrell, is taken as a clerk into the service of Marmaduke, not before having gained the affections of Gertrude Arden, a poor seamstress, living has been dipping into his father's cashbox, and dreading the vigilance of the clerk, has him instantly dismissed. After wandering for some months in the country, meets Irving, who professing deep friendship for him, gives him his watch, which he soon after accuses Blanc of stealing, the motive for this being that Blanc interfered with his designs on Gertrude. Blanc is sentenced to some imprisonment, but on again meeting with Gertrude affairs have somewhat changed. This is brought about by John Gough, the murderer of Marmaduke's brother. This "hard nailer" has been receiving from time to time sums of money demanded to keep the secret, but having fallen desperately in love with Gertrude, promises her, if she will but marry him, to secure to her the property of which she was defrauded at his birth. A trying ordeal this for the loving girl, who has sworn fidelity to her first and only love. At last she consents, in the hopes of making her lover happy, and soon settles matters by calling him a villain to his face. This maddens Irving, who, saying he has nothing to live for, takes a leap from the Thames embankment into the river. He, however, is saved by Gabb, and affairs now get arranged. In the last scene Marmaduke endeavors to poison Blanc with a cup of tea, but the "hard nailer" is stabbed by Irving. In a painfully long scene—too long by far—Gough gives a history of his doings, and reveals the true particular, and lengthy account of the life and trials of the "waif"—all of no interest until the last.

Mr. Marchant is the author of a new drama with the inquisitorial title of "What will Become of Him; or, Life in London as it Was and as it Is," produced at the Britannia Theatre on May 20th. Mr. Marchant is a clever adapter, and knows, as well as any living author, what will suit the audience he is endeavoring to please accordingly, from him a series of piece of "real life"—which were received with great favor. Introduction of a brother's son is the groundwork of the plot, and, to one Raspy Simkis is the execution of the dirty duties of another gentleman with the euphonious name of Bumpy Crickets, however, commits the action, and so leaves Mr. Clitheroe in undisputed possession of the wealth which belongs to the stolen child, which, fortunately for the successful termination of the piece, is nipping one and has been the unmistakable legacy of a port wine mark on its neck. The boy grows up, gets neglected, and is looked upon as "Nobody's Child," having for his constant companion a low mongrel dog called Bob. The master is wretched in the extreme, but this is to be certainly the case of canine prosperity. Clitheroe, finding his sister in love with a poor clerk, gets one of the rascals to lure him to a music hall; while he is there he is about to be despatched, when Nobody's Child and another save him. Outside the Alhambra Palace the denouement takes place. Nobody's Child, who has been discovered minus the ear, shows the mark. When Clitheroe emerges from the theatre he is stopped, confesses all, villainy is thwarted, justice is meted out to all, and Nobody's Child is at last recognized as his own. The piece is crowded with incidents—too much so, indeed—and one scene, in which the dying daughter of Slunks appears with her face bedaubed in the most inartistic fashion, ought to be modified.

At the Pavilion Mr. Abrahams' specialty for the holiday season was what is called "a new and original drama," entitled "Pride." Or the Quality of Mercy is not Strained. The old story of a proud father wishing and insisting that his daughter shall marry a lordling, while the lady, with a will of her own, does nothing of the sort, but secretly marries his clerk. For this disobedience she is turned from her father's house, and after a son is born, suffers with her husband great privations. Both, in fact, are nearly starving. The daughter, Nelly, seeks needlework of her proud parent-in-law, but is refused, while her husband leaves a sick bed in order to obtain employment. The father, who boasts of the name of Lovemoney, steals the child, and by this means gets the daughter. Nemesis, however, is on the track of the remorseless Lovemoney, who is induced by two "pals" to invest in a mine, which has been concocted to swindle him. The bait takes, and as a consequence Lovemoney is ruined, and in the last scene of the drama seeks forgiveness from his daughter and her husband, which it was prophesied at the beginning of the piece he would do. Justice is not slow on the heels of the rascals, for, in attempting to rob a Jew, they are tracked, caught and handed over to justice. Two characters which play a prominent part in the piece ought not to go unmentioned. These are Jacob Levi, an eccentric kind of money lender, and his daughter, Rachel. The young lady is sadly in love with Philip, and to be near him fills the position of lady's maid to Nelly, the wife. In giving her mistress good advice, Lovemoney drives her from his house, which so prevs on the father that he is in time able to return this insult with double interest.

IMMORALITY OF THE PARISIAN STAGE.—Under the empire, with its police for censors of morals, language and costume were often free enough, but we have never seen them so licentious as under this regenerated republic. It is impossible to go into faithful detail in so delicate a subject, or to reproduce the passages and scenes we might select for illustration. We can only say that the broadest double entendres are so slightly gazes as to be clear to the dullest comprehension. The actors not only slips into obscenity, but into very vulgar and demonstrative obscenity; and that gross ideas are pointed by corresponding gestures—gestures that would be rejected on simply artistic grounds by a Spanish gipsy or an Indian Nautch girl. Nor need any one go further east than the Varieties on the Boulevard Montmartre, if they care to prove our words. They give a piece there, "La Revue en Ville," and such a vicious representation of certain scenes as is presented by Mme. Silly we have seldom seen. Nothing can easily be worse, although Chaumont, in the "Madame, attend Monsieur," at the same theatre, runs her sister actress hard. The acting is excellent in both cases; but the cleverest acting cannot make such coarse suggestions endurable by people of ordinary refinement. It is matter of notoriety that the Varieties prides itself on its actresses—that shape takes precedence of talent among the fair subordinates and the directors do all they can to parade the forms they have been fortunate enough to hire. Further to the east, at the Menus Plaisirs, on the Boulevard de Strasbourg, the costume is still more scanty; the ladies for the most part wear cut close tunics and the lightest of flesh colored tights. Here there the famous Theresa, in "La Reine Carotte," warbles melodies appropriate to such an exhibition. It is something, after all we may see elsewhere, that our easy old friends of the Palais Royal are neither better nor worse than they used to be, although the plays do go forward to a continuous chorus of "Oh, oh's" from the shamefaced audience, and we know as they say in themselves, "La glace se fond vite au Palais Royal." Talent is everywhere supplemented or supplied by flagrant immorality. And to these theatres crowd night after night "respectable" as well as dissipated Paris; and you see boxes filled with family parties—modest-looking young girls laughing at the antics or puzzling out the allusions of their naked sisters—taking the cue to listen and to think from the bravos of rakes in the parterre who watch the effect of the entendres on comparative innocence. Such is the school in which young Paris is learning life and morality, and from the Francais downward, with no exception we know of, the instruction is equally prononce and advanced.—Pall Mall Gazette.

CHAMPION BICYCLE RACE.—At the Molineux grounds, Wolverhampton, Eng., a one mile champion bicycle race came off, for prizes of £8 and £5 respectively, on May 20th, 21st and 22d. Five entered, out of whom three showed and ran as follows:—Heat 1.—T. Johnson, of London, 1; Keen, 2. Johnson took the lead by three yards; at the second lap they were close together, and so continued, not three yards in the whole of the distance dividing them; at the last lap a splendid contest for place ensued, Johnson just winning by half a yard. Time, 3min. 34sec. Heat 2—Shelton and Higham were to have contended together, but Higham did not put in an appearance and Shelton was entitled to a walk over, but agreed to run a distance with the losing man in the previous heat. At the signal they went away at a rapid pace, Keen having the lead at the second lap by three yards, and a close and exciting race ensued. At the fourth lap they were wheel to wheel. Keen, however, made a fine spurt forward, and, in spite of Shelton's efforts, proved the winner by half a yard. Time, 3min. 12sec. The final heat was looked for and watched with immense assemblage with great interest, the above being contested for by three crack bicyclists, all starting from scratch, viz., Shelton, of Wolverhamton; Keen and J. T. Johnson, of London. At the signal they shot away, Keen taking the lead, closely followed by Shelton and Johnson, the latter at the second lap being full 30 yards in the rear. Shelton and Keen kept close together up to the last lap, when Shelton spurted forward and got in front (amidst loud cheers), and won a well contested race by 10 yards; Johnson 30 yards in the rear. Time of the winner, 3min. 13sec., the quickest time on record. Shelton took the first prize (silver cup and £15), Keen second (£5) and Johnson third (£3) also. The winner will have to contend a second time in a champion race on the above ground before he becomes possessor of the cup, the date to be fixed by the proprietor. Messrs. Baldwin and Burns officiated as judges and Mr. Bushell timekeeper. handicapper and starter. On the 23d ult. the contest was brought to a close in the presence of upwards of 2,000 spectators. For neatest costume, for which seven entered, the first prize (£3) was awarded to Rudge, of Wolverhampton; the second to Wright, of Birmingham, (£).

BONES AS A VICTIM OF THE GREEN-EYE.

INTERLOCUTOR.—As we are all here, we will call upon MR. BONES to tell the public "what he knows about courting, &c."

BONES.—Dyar! hi! Yes, I's been dere, for certain, but I can't say dat I was always de lucky feller dat I ought to be. In fac', de last 'casion I tried it on I was bilked.

INT.—You floored her with a billet, I suppose, and was driven away from her father's house by your sudden speech.

BONES.—My sudden's "speech p!" O, she didn't preach; I did it all myself. You know a feller sometimes gits tired of his own wife, and mine am de most jealousest ob her sect. She's always pullin' and tearin me de most awful when I'm wid a gentin', till it was 'most wid Bowery, and as full of comfort as de Wenus ob Medicine.

INT.—Be more careful! The Venus of Medici, sir.

BONES.—Well, it's all de same—dey was both on 'em virgins—virgin's ends forty, dat is to say. Well, de gal she 'cipricate my tender passion, an' lodged her my heart an' han', and lend her to de freeayter and de smash balls, till de poor gal was so crazy as a bed-bug, an' I wasn't much better. I writ her a letter, and de next time she passed me in de gentin' I presentin' her wid candies an' sweetmeats, and dat kind o' tings. Says she, kind o' sighin'—"Bones," says she, "it must go werry hard on your poor wife."

"O," says I, "don't you mind her; she's an old scarecrow, any way." Wid dat she gib word to a yell like an injen on de war path and went for me at de same time. Jus' den de do' busted open, and she busted into tears, and I busted der smoot of a feller dat come in at dat moment wid de light.

INT.—Came in with delight, sir! What do you mean?

BONES.—No, no—wid de candle—and den she scream till she busted her corsets wid rage, and I busted out ob de room and west on a bust, and, would you b'lieve it, it wasn't my gal at all, but my wife! She'd persuaded my Phillis' fader to send her away and cum in her place. I was four and sixpence out on her, too, and dat was all I got for it. Tinks I, nebber mind, I fixes you for dat, bime-by, presently. So what does I do but when she say she'd be dere de next night satin' I takes along wid me a big bag ob somethin', and dere I find her, su' enough, sittin' alone in de dark. "Gub us a kiss," said I, and wid dat I made a rush for her and emptied a whole bag ob flour ober her, till she look'd as if she'd been tumbled in a bath o' whitewash. De woman yelled like a stuck pig, and raise de house, an' dey all rushed in wid rushlights in der hands, and blest if it wasn't my pal herself, arter all! Hasn't spoke to her fell so cheap in all my life—nebber, nebber! Hasn't spoke to me since.

INT.—Well, as we've heard about your girl, we'll now listen to something about

A Girl at the Sewing Machine.

Fairy like's the music that floats upon the air,
Not a note of Strauss! can with it compare.
Swiftly throbs my heart—I hear the whirring wheel goes 'round.
With its click, click, click!
And its happy trick
Of stilling all other sound.

Chorus—With its click, click, click, etc.

O'er the table leaning with a flushing brow,
In a low voice singing songs that haunt me now,
Casting darts to right and left as the needle goes up and down,
With a click, click, click!
And her quick
That all other noise doth drown.

Chorus—With its click, click, click, etc.

No need for other language than the eyes may frame,
Full my arms steal round the lady's fair fame,
Till my arms steal round the lady's fair fame,
Then lip meets lip, and fresh sweets I sip where the loves their dews distil.
With a click, click, click!

I ALWAYS "TAKE IT IN."

BY ARTHUR W. FRENCH.

Please give attention while I sing a song as I hope will please,
But should you say its not the thing, why then I'll own the cheese;"
Just put one penny for any fun, no matter what's to win—
Then bet your lonely dime on one that always "Takes it In."

Chorus.—No matter what the fun may be,
Or where it will begin,
When you get there just look for me—
I always "Take it In."

I passed a girl the other night, who gave me a sly wink,
I turned about and said "all right"—the said what do you think?
Oh, nothing, miss, but let me state I hope is is no sin,
But when I see such temptation I always "Take it In."

Chorus.—No matter what the fun may be, &c.

Of course like many other chaps, I'm "dead" upon some lass,
She don't get mad or give me slaps when 'er "my hand I pass;"
We often talk of wedded life, and how its joys begin,
But soon I hope to call her wife, who will "Take it In."

Chorus.—No matter what, &c.

And so it is from day to day, no matter where you be,
You find that some one's on the "lay" for drinks or stamps, or spree.
That all the people there and here have got some little sin,
And when they think that no one's near, they always "Take it In."

Chorus.—No matter what, &c.

"Crossing on the Ferry" with my "Little Maggie May."

A MEDLEY OF PLAYS.

A couple of Baltimore correspondents, G. W. L. and S. R., send for publication in the CLIPPER the following "aggregation" of titles of plays:—

"Lord Dundreary" was "On Hand" to "Help" "The Boy Detective" to get "On the Track" of "The Forty Thieves," who were "Not Guilty" of stealing the "Emerald Ring" from "The Merchant of Venice," but were after the "Ticket of Leave Man," who had run away with "His Darling," who got a "Divorce" from "Kit, the Arkansas Traveler," just then "Out at Sea" looking for "The Rag Picker of Paris," who had stolen "Dollars" from the "Bitches of New York," and they were in pursuit of "Lorle, the Belle of Canton," who had married "The Stranger" for "Money," but who turned out to be "Nobody's Child" "Lost in London," who was caught going "Across the Continent" under the protection of "Bulldog Bill" and the "Live Indian," and this was what gave rise to the report of "Foul Play."

THE DRAMA IN PHILADELPHIA IN 1844.

Eugene F. Eberle, Esq., prompter at the Walnut Street Theatre, Philadelphia, favors us with the annexed bill of the Walnut when the pit was in its glory at a "levy" a ticket. Now, the pit—or parquet, as it is called—is the place where the reckerels habitues "most do congregate."

THE TURF.

JEROME PARK SPRING RACE MEETING.

SECOND DAY—THURSDAY, JUNE 6TH.

VICTORIA WINS THE LEXINGTON STAKES; ALSO A PURSE BY CLIPS HANGTOWN; ALIKE WINS HIGH ZERO A QUARTER DASH; MIDWAY THE MILE AND THREE-QUARTERS DASH; AND MACKINTOSH THE STEEPLE CHASE.

The continuous heavy storm of Wednesday, the 5th inst., caused the American Jockey Club to postpone the racing of the second day of their meeting until Thursday, the 6th inst. The morning dawned auspiciously, the clear sky and bright sun giving promise of a delightful day, which was fully realized. The track, however, was deep and heavy, and the going fetlock deep in mud. There was a large and fashionable attendance, but hardly equal to that on the previous Saturday, the opening day of the meeting.

The first race was highly exciting and gratifying. The victory of Mr. Belmont's filly, Victoria, in the Ladies' stakes, was highly popular, and that gentleman was very warmly congratulated on the breaking of the spell which for over twelve months has seemed to rest over the Babylon stable. The winner is a handsome chestnut filly, about 15¾ hands high, by Censor, out of Camilla, a King Tom mare, and was brought to the post in splendid condition by Mr. Jacob Pincus. She was ridden by young Gradwell, an English jockey of established reputation (having won, among other great races, the Cambridgeshire stakes on Vestminster), and his first mount was a successful one; his fine riding, patience and judgment contributing greatly to the victory. Mr. Belmont bred Victoria himself, at his Nursery Stud Farm, Babylon, L. I. She ran four times last year as a two year old, running second to Nema in the Flash stakes, third to St. Patrick in the Saratoga stakes, and unplaced to Joe Daniels in the Nursery, and to Grey Planet in the Champagne stakes at Jerome Park, last fall. She is engaged in the Monmouth Oaks and West End Hotel stakes, at Long Branch. Value of the stakes, $1,800.

The result of the second race, the Jockey Club Handicap, was a heavy blow to the followers of Col. McDaniels' stable. Tubman was made the favorite and backed at even money against the field, which comprised Alroy and Quintard. The latter made the running for a mile, when the race became reduced to a match between Alroy and the favorite, the former winning very cleverly by two lengths. This was a great triumph for Mr. Donahue and Hugh Gaffney, and their stable bids fair to be as formidable on the flat as it is in steeple chasing and hurdle racing.

The easy manner in which Messrs. Hunter and Travers' Eclipse colt, Alarm, repeated his Saturday's victory in the mile and quarter dash, must have made the stable regret that they did not start him in the Belmont Stakes, a race he must have been about winning. It was fortunate that no claim was put in for Alarm, who was entered to be sold for $1,200.

The Virginia stable of Major Doswell, which has been unlucky since its arrival at Jerome Park, in consequence of Eolus and Armistice having gone amiss, and the defeat of Winsap in the Fordham Stakes, had a slight turn of good luck in the mile and three quarter dash, which Midday won in such hollow style that she did not change owners; a friendly claim on the part of Mr. Babcock, the owner of the second horse, enabling Mr. Doswell to retain her in his stable.

The steeple chase for gentlemen riders was a very exciting affair; three horses, Mackintosh, Jim Tisdale and Mary Hennessy, ridden respectively by Messrs. Beresford, Lawrence and Clason, starting. The jockeyship displayed by these gentlemen was brilliant and would have done credit to the most experienced professionals. A mistake in the course on the part of Tisdale and the mare, enabled Mr. Beresford on Mackintosh to open a considerable gap, and he won literally "in a walk," amid hearty cheering and applause. An objection from Mr. Lawrence that Mackintosh had not gone the right course was overruled. The winner is a brown horse, and was bred by Mr. Blenkiron at Middle Park Stud farm, England, in 1862. He is by Weatherbit out of Actress by Annandale, and in 1865, won the Pontefract Castle Plate handicap, Derby owned and trained by John Osborne. He was afterward sold for a hunter, and was used as such for several seasons. His owner made a present of him to Mr. Jay, of this city, conditional on his training him for the turf, and this was his first and fortunately successful essay in this country. He is a beautiful jumper, and was brought to the post very fit in condition by Mr. A. Taylor.

THE LADIES' STAKES

is for three year old fillies. Like its prototype, the Derby Oaks, $100 each, h. f., with $1,000 added, of which the second horse receives $300. This stake closed in July, 1870, with thirty-seven nominations (a falling off from the previous year of thirteen) and of these seven came to the post. The lamented death of James S. Watson rendered the nominations of Bonnie Katie and the Jessie Dixon filly void. The starters were Experience Oaks, Victoria, Venetia, Nema, Mimi, Elsie and Crouse's Revolver filly, Nuisance. Rarely has there been a race in which the horses running sold so closely together in the pools as on this occasion, and it was difficult to find out which was the favorite; first, Experience Oaks, then Elsie, and again Victoria, having the call. Elsie had won a good race of mile heats at the Lexington May Meeting, and as she looked very fit she had a host of backers. Mr. Belmont's filly was also strongly fancied, because she was in high order, and had the confidence of her able trainer, Mr. Jacob Pincus. Nema and Experience Oaks, as well as Crouse's filly, had also warm friends, but Mr. Chamberlin's filly was backward in condition, and her plucky owner only had a trifle on her on the off chance. Pools sold as follows:—

Reynolds	$80	$150	$180	$200	$220	$165
Belmont	150	175	160	140	100	60
Parks	130	160	155	170	225	200
Crouse	145	155	140	175	140	140
Clarke & Grinstead	180	150	80	110	75	90
Withers	75	135	75	120	90	135
Venetia	65	60	65	90	80	60
Total	$920	$985	$855	$1,005	$930	$850

A start was effected without much trouble, Elsie being in front, with Mimi next; Victoria, third; Nuisance, fourth, and the rest in a ruck behind. Going around the club house bluff Mimi got her head in front, but as they came in view after rounding the hill, Elsie was again leading the field, followed by Mimi, Venetia, Nuisance, Victoria, Nema and Experience Oaks in the rotation named. Coming up the home-stretch the horses took close order, all of them running under a pull except Elsie and Mimi, whose riders were making all the use they could of them. The judges' stand was passed in the above order, Elsie leading Mr. Withers' filly half a length. Opposite the stables Gradwell took a good pull at Victoria, and Experience Oaks rushed into third place. After rounding the hill and coming in view again, Elsie and Mimi were lapped, the former slightly in front, Experience Oaks third, a length behind them. Turning into the last quarter Gradwell let out Victoria, and chopping down Experience Oaks and Mimi, challenged Elsie, had her safe in a few strides, and drawing clear of her opponents, won the race by three lengths, the same distance separating Elsie from Experience Oaks; Nema was fourth; Mimi, fifth; Nuisance, sixth, and Venetia last. Time, 3:11. Value of the stakes, $2,800. Summary:—

JEROME PARK, N.Y.—Spring meeting, American Jockey Club. Second day, June 6th, 1872. First race, the Ladies' Stakes, for fillies, three years old, $100 each, half forfeit, with $1,000 added by the club; the second to receive $300 out of the stakes; colts to carry 107lbs. Closed July 10th, 1870, with thirty-seven nominations. A dash of a mile and five furlongs. Value of stakes, $3,800.

THE JOCKEY CLUB HANDICAP

a sweepstakes of $100 each, half forfeit, with $1,000 added by the club, of which the second horse received $300, had 22 nominations, 10 declarations, and three starters out of the twelve acceptances. This small field was to be attributed to the heavy state of the track, and to the going notice of Salina and Eolus. Col. McDaniels started Tubman, and kept Abdelkoree in the stable, while Mr. Stringfield ran Quintard and Mr. Donahue Alroy, Patsy Hennessy riding the latter. Tubman was the favorite in the pools, which sold as follows:—

McDaniel. $350	$610	$1,050	$1,250	$500	$300
Quintard.. 185	335	1,000	700	380	440
Alroy..... 165	150	315	650	280	440

Tubman took the lead, and retained it until they went around the Club House hill, where Quintard deprived him of it and retained it until nearing the judges' stand on the first mile, when Alroy, in turn, showed in front. Near the quarter pole, Tubman passed Quintard, the latter already beaten, and it is evident that he has not recovered from the severe kick he received on Saturday. The race now became reduced to a match between Alroy and Tubman, and after a capital race Alroy defeated the favorite by two lengths, Quintard beaten off. Time, 3:48. Value of stakes, $1,950. Summary:—

SAME DAY—SECOND RACE.—Jockey Club Handicap, sweepstakes of $100 each, half forfeit, and only $20 if declared out, with $1,000 added by the club; the second horse to receive $300 out of the stakes. Closed March 1st with twenty-two nominations, of which ten declared out and paid $20. Winners, after publication of weights, of $1,000, to carry five pounds; of $2,000, seven pounds extra. A dash of two miles.

THE THIRD RACE

was a dash of a mile and quarter, for a purse of $500; entrance money to the second horse; the winner to be claimed for $1,800, with allowances in weights according to the entered selling price. The starters were Alarm, Eastern Star, Echo, Impecunious, Jerseyman, Lord Byron and Rounder; Nickajack having been drawn at the last moment. Pools sold as follows:—

Alarm	$100	$520	$1,100	$620	$310	$460
Eastern Star	35	280	360	265	—	—
Echo	45	265	460	300	450	640
Impecunious	80	275	400	310
The Field	100	330	420	350	—	—
Totals	$330	$1,640	$2,750	$1,825	$760	$1,100

The start, which was from the three-quarter pole at the head of the home-stretch, was a good one. Rounder was first off, Impecunious second, Lord Byron and Alarm next, and the others in a ruck. They ran in this order past the stand, to the quarter pole and around the bluff, where Impecunious fell away and Lord Byron became second. Skirting the hill and coming in view, Rounder was leading, Lord Byron second, and Echo third, with Alarm next. Before reaching the three quarter pole Alarm shot to the front, passing his horses as if they were standing still, and won the race easily by ten lengths, Rounder second and Lord Byron third, the rest unplaced. Time, 2:17¼. Summary:—

SAME DAY.—THIRD RACE.—Purse $500, five per cent. entrance to go to second horse. The winner subject to be claimed for $1,500 carrying weight for age. If entered to be sold for $1,000, allowed five pounds; for $800 seven pounds; for $500, ten pounds. A dash of a mile and a quarter.

THE FOURTH RACE

was for a purse of $800, entrance money to the second horse; the winner to be claimed for $2,000, one mile and three quarters. The runners were Midday, Doctor, Frank Swift, Asteroid colt, Gao and Flora McIvor, who sold in the pools at the following rates:—

Midday	$700	$750	$1,300	$1,500	$500	$400
Doctor	230	280	470	460
Gao	90	120	225	140

Frank Swift	105	105	220	140
Totals	$1,255	$1,455	$2,425	$2,430	$770	$910

The Asteroid colt, belonging to Mr. John O'Donnell, broke away and ran two miles before he could be stopped, and this led to his being withdrawn. The Doctor cut out the running for a mile and a half, when Midday went up, collared and passed him, and won in a common canter by three lengths. Doctor second and Frank Swift third; Flora McIvor last. Time, 3:24. Summary:—

SAME DAY.—FOURTH RACE.—Purse $800, 5 per cent. entrance to go to second horse; the winner subject to be claimed for $2,000, carrying weight for age. If entered to be sold for $1,500, allowed 3 lbs.; for $1,000, 7 lbs.; if entered to be sold for $5,000, to carry 5 lbs. extra, and if not to be sold, 15 lbs. extra. THE STEEPLE CHASE, for a silver cup, value $500, given by Messrs. L. W. Jerome and P. Lorillard, for members of the club, had three entries—Mackintosh, ridden by Mr. J. G. Beresford; Jim Tisdale, ridden by Mr. J. Lawrence, and Mary Hennessy, ridden by Mr. A. Classon. The pool betting was as follows:—

Tisdale	$220	$700	$350	$250	$200	$400
Mackintosh	125	220	130	135	125	470
Mary Hennessy	300	300	220	200	160
Totals	$645	$1,320	$700	$585	$485	$870

Tisdale took the lead at starting, Mackintosh second, and Mary Hennessy third; the course being the regular steeple chase course. All the leaps were beautifully taken, but the riders of Tisdale and Mary Hennessy, having made a mistake in the course on the picnic hill, were obliged to turn back, which gave Mackintosh a commanding lead, which he maintained throughout and won "in a walk" by any number of lengths. A pretty race for second place ended in favor of Jim Tisdale. Time, 5:32. Summary:—

SAME DAY.—FIFTH RACE.—Steeple chase; Post Stakes, $50 each, play or pay, with a silver cup valued at $500, presented to the winner by Messrs. W. Jerome and P. Lorillard; Welter weights; members of the American Jockey Club only to ride; closed June 1st, with three subscribers. A dash of about two and a half miles over the usual steeple chase course.

DEATH OF AN ENGLISH TRAINER.—Job Marson, the oldest trainer of race horses in Great Britain, died at Beverley, Yorkshire, Eng., on May 30th, at the ripe old age of 84. The deceased, better known on the turf as "Old Job," was a remarkable man. He commenced life as a light weight jockey in Sheriff, of Malton, trainer and jockey, after which he became head lad to Akroyd, who then occupied Whitewall House, afterwards the residence of John Scott. Subsequently he commenced business on his own ac count as a race horse trainer at Sutton Cottage, between Whitewall Corner and Malton, and from this he removed to Bellevue, which he occupied for many years, and which is within a field's length of Weighton. Here he trained for a number of gentlemen, including the Marquis of Queensberry, Marquis of Blandford, Hon. S. Pelham, Count Brandenberg, Hon. H. Butler, Sir Mathew White Ridley, Sir Charles Monck, Sir Henry Boynton, Capt. Reynard, Capts. Cooper, Capt. Littledale, Capt. H. B. Peters, Messrs. M. Fowles, R. Watt, and many others. In 1847 Mr. Marson removed to Beverley, and it was here that he brought forward the celebrated mare Nancy, winner of the Chester Cup, Goodwood Cup, and a great number of other races. In 1851, in which year the sporting fraternity of Beverley and Hull were mad with excitement amongst the best horses trained by the deceased, Hungerford, Sheet Anchor, Robin Hood, Malakie, Cinderella, Humphrey Clinker, and the late Job Marson, one of the best jockeys of his day, who won the Derby on Teddington and Voltiguer, and St. Leger on Nutwith and Voltiguer, besides a host of other great races, was son to the deceased.

AT BEACON PARK, Boston, a capital trot came off on May 30th, for a purse of $500, for horses that had never trotted better than 2:38, mile heats, best 3 in 5, in harness. The contestants were D. M. Beckler's brown mare Lady Morris, A. D. Webber's bay gelding Honest Brock, James Lannan's brown gelding Titan, H. Brock's sorrel mare Josephine, and Carroll's bay mare Lottie and E. H. Cunningham's chestnut gelding Mark Twain. Josephine had the call in the betting before the start, and she won the first heat in 2:44. Mark Twain the second in 2:45; and Lady Morris the three next, and the race in 2:46½; 2:45½; 2:44. Summary:—

RETIREMENT OF A PROMINENT ENGLISH TURFMAN.—Racing circles in England have been surprised by the announcement of the retirement from the turf of Captain Machell, or as his enemies call him, "Captain Mac Hell," and his probable departure for America. He has long been the right hand man of the confederacy for which Bloss of Newmarket trains, and which is composed of Lord Calthorpe, Mr. Chaplain, Sir George Chetwynd, Mr. T. E. Walker and himself. They effected a great coup in 1867 when they won the Derby with Hermit, who started with the odds of 100 to 1 against him, and they have since effected many almost equally great surprises. It is said that he intends to establish a racing stable in America. The captain, it may be noted, is a clever boxer, and very ready to take his own part in an impromptu affray.

BRITISH CHESS ASSOCIATION.—It is a great and, we must own it, an almost unlooked-for pleasure to announce the renewed activity of this celebrated society. Near the last of this month it will hold a grand metropolitan congress, the three great London clubs furnishing the area of battle tourneys, grand and minor, including the great challenge cup, now held by Mr. Wisker; problems, blindfold seances, consultation and telegraphic contests, a grand dinner, etc. There! Any one would know that gentlemen of courage, zeal and experience had this in charge. Herr Lowenthal, general manager; J. Wisker, Esq., 12 Charlotte street, Bedford square, London, secretary.

PATENT

SELF-ADJUSTING BAT.

In the accompanying cut "AA" represents a hole bored in the larger end of the Bat, in length and size proportioned to the length and weight of the Bat.

"B" represents a piece of Lignumvitæ closely fitting to the hole, yet sliding freely. "C" are pieces of cork tightly fitting and stationary. "D" is a plug driven firmly, and fastened in its place.

The advantages of the use of all other Bats are:—

First. It gives the full regulation size without the extra and useless weight at the larger end of the Bat, which is removed by the boring.

Second. This extra or stationary weight is replaced by a movable or sliding weight, "B," which may be either greater or less than that removed, as may be desired.

Third. This movable or sliding weight is always where most needed in using the Bat, viz:—When the Bat is elevated for the stroke, the weight is near the centre, giving the striker a more perfect control of Bat, and, as the stroke is made, the weight slides toward the end, greatly increasing the weight of the blow.

Fourth. The "Centre of Percussion" is found to be the same as with the ordinary Bats. This is the universal testimony of those who are using them.

Fifth. The striking is more perfect near the centre of the ordinary Bat, is never experienced in using the Self-adjusting Bat.

CAPT. JAS. WOOD, of the White Stockings, and many other well known professionals, have used LYMAN'S PATENT BAT in their most successful games the present season, fully endorse them in every respect, and will use none others since obtaining them.

Nothing but the best materials are used, well seasoned, second growth White Ash, used in their construction.

frequent testimony, during the season just closed, to the talents and popularity of this charming artiste and Chevalier, Mr. Wm. Crompton, has closed her season and is now enjoying the comforts of home at her summer residence at Long Branch, N. J.

FRANK RAY, juvenile and walking gent, can be addressed care of this office.

WM. HORACE LINGARD has engaged a company for the season of 1872 and '73, whose names are in another column, and artists are requested to accept the notice as an answer to their applications.

"SAPPHO" IN COURT. During the past week Judge Barrett, in the Supreme Court, granted a writ of habeas corpus upon the application of George D. Browne, who prayed that Kate F. Ellis, known in the theatrical profession as "Sappho," might be placed under his guardianship and control according to an agreement entered into between himself and the parents of "Sappho" at Prescott, Canada, Sept. 20th, 1871, by which the said Browne, under certain conditions, which he claims to have fulfilled, was to have the direction and full charge of all public performances given by "Sappho" during the period of two years. Decision reserved.

TERESA ANTONINO, premiere danseuse, can be addressed through her agent, Colonel T. A. Brown.

CHARLOTTE STANLEY, leading lady, advertises that she can be engaged for the coming season.

STARS and combinations desiring to secure the new Assembly Hall, Richmond, Va., can address Morris Simmonds as per advertisement. The house will seat one thousand, and has a stage, with scenery, &c.

Musical.

THE NEW ORLEANS OPERA AND DRAMATIC ASSOCIATION is the title of a company now being formed at New Orleans, La. There is to be a capital stock of $75,000, divided in 150 shares, of $500 each, to be paid as follows: An installment of 10 per cent in cash is to be paid as soon as the whole number of shares have been subscribed for, the balance to be paid in seven annual installments of $50 each, on the first Monday in May of each year. Each stockholder will be required to pay an annual contribution of $100, which entitles them to a free entrance to the theatre to any public performance, and there is a provision that any stockholder who refuses to pay such annual contribution forfeits his stock. The board of managers are not to be allowed to make any contracts involving the payment at any time of more money than there may then be in the treasury, and they shall not have power to conduct the opera on the account of the association, but they may lease the same, or give it to any responsible party, with a subsidy not exceeding $15,000, the lessee to pay the annual charges. The company already numbers 100 subscribers.

"OH, HORACE," is the title of a new song and chorus, just published by White, Smith & Perry, of Boston.

PROF. JOS. HAVLIK, solo clarionet and baritone player, advertises that he can be engaged.

ALFRED KELLNER advertises that he can be engaged for opera, concert or drama.

MR. AND MRS. GEORGE A. FLORANCE are at their summer residence at Martha's Vineyard, Mass.

MR. AND MRS. J. A. ARNOLD, baritone and soprano, vocalists, advertise that they can be engaged.

THE TRIMBLE OPERA HOUSE, Albany, N.Y., has done a fair business the past week, with the Holman Opera Troupe. Our correspondent, writing on June 8th, says: "On Monday evening they presented 'La Grande Duchesse,' and the farce of 'My Neighbors' Wife;' Tuesday, 'The Bohemian Girl' and 'My Neighbor's Wife;' Wednesday, 'La Perichole,' and the burlesque of 'Black Eyed Susan;' Thursday, 'Barbe Bine' and 'Black Eyed Susan;' Friday, 'La Grande Duchesse;' Saturday, 'Satanella,' and the farce of 'The Browns and Smiths.' In the 'Bohemian Girl,' D. C. Peakes gave an excellent rendition of Devilshoof; Mr. Brandisi, as Thaddeus, acted and sang very well; Miss Sallie Holman gave a very nice rendition of Arline, and W. Davidge, Jr., the comedian of the company, appeared to excellent advantage in the farces and burlesques given; his acting as Captain Crosstree, in 'Black Eyed Susan,' being especially praiseworthy.

THE RECEIPTS for the year ending April 30, 1872, at the Academy of Music, Philadelphia, were $41,136 54, and the expenditures during the same period were $33,748 37, leaving a balance of $7,388 17. The operatic performances have been 45 in number, and the dramatic performances 38, during the year.

MARX HASSLER'S CONCERT GARDEN, Eighth, near Vine streets, Philadelphia, will be opened about the 24th inst, with orchestral promenade concerts as the feature of attraction.

CARL SENTZ'S ORCHESTRA will inaugurate the summer season at the Mennerchor Garden, Philadelphia, on the 14th inst.

A COMPLIMENTARY CONCERT to Miss Josie Jones, the Cincinnati, O., contralto, is to come off at Pike's Opera House, in that city, June 11th.

A GRAND CONCERT to FRANZ ABT, the German composer, was given at Saengerfest Hall, in Cincinnati, O., June 8th, by the musical societies of that city.

THE BERGER BELL RINGERS closed their season at Platt's Hall, San Francisco, Cal., on June 1st, during which they achieved fair success, and won favorable notices. Their tour in the interior, says our correspondent, will, no doubt, be highly successful, as few troupes are traveling this season.

THE MARIOTTI OPERA TROUPE, minus Mad. Mariotti, but retaining the real stars of the company, give five performances at the Detroit, Mich., Opera House, commencing June 10th.

J. S. WULFF, leader of orchestra, advertises that he can be engaged.

THE BARNABEE CONCERT TROUPE are announced to sing at Albany, N. Y., June 13th.

BLIND TOM is to give a concert at Rockford, Ill., June 13th.

MESSRS. BARTON, ROGERS AND HUDSON, formerly of the "Old Continentals," are doing the Saginaw Valley, Mich., giving concerts at all the principal towns and villages.

MR. WESLEY ARNOLD, of the Syracuse, N. Y. University, who possesses the unusual gift of a double voice, gave a concert at Wieting Opera House, Syracuse, N. Y., June 4th, and demonstrated his ability to perform the extraordinary feat of singing basso and soprano at the same time. It being Mr. Arnold's first public appearance, he was not able to do himself full justice. The singing of Mr. J. G. Parkhurst, an excellent basso, of Oswego, was capital.

JOSEPH NOBLES, solo alto, flute and piccolo player, whose address find elsewhere, can be engaged.

M'LLE AIMEE'S OPERA BOUFFE TROUPE played to good business at the Academy of Music, Chicago, Ill., the past week. They have appeared in "La Grande Duchesse," "La Perichole," "Barbe Bleue," "Orphee aux Enfers," and "La Belle Helene," and rendered each opera in a praiseworthy style. The troupe goes to Salt Lake from there, and will appear in San Francisco July 1st.

Variety Halls.

ON VARIETY HALLS in Cincinnati, O., our correspondent wrote, on June 8th, as follows: "At the Race Street Varieties Marsh Adams closed this week, and has gone into Kentucky to rusticate. George Morton has succeeded to his position of stage manager. Lew. Cavana did not go to St. Louis, Mo., this week, as was announced, and has been re-engaged here. His project of traveling double with 'Cincinnatus' has also been abandoned, and the latter is at his home in Xenia, O. Annie Hindle and Lucy Adams continue leading favorites. Miss Hindle closes with this week. Miss Adams remains another week, and opens in Indianapolis, Ind., on the 17th. Minnie Baker's dances and songs, the ballads of Sadie Lloyd and Lou. Florence, and the humorous eccentricities of Finley, Morton and Cavana, make out the balance of the programme. Chrissie Morrell, vocalist, is to open on the 17th. . . . At the Pacific, Emma Barrett began June 2d, but for some reason remained one night only. J. W. Eagan also opened in Irish songs and dances, and has taken well, displaying considerable vim. Another new appearance has been Master Victor, late of the Manning party. He does a good clog, also song and dance. George White, Walter Gail, and M'lle Zulelia still remain, and a good programme is given. . . . At the Olympic Theatre, the stationary of the Lawrence troupe continues a leading attraction. The troupe has been re-inforced by the addition of Bertha Manning, a finely-formed girl, and there are now four ladies therein. The original patomime of 'Dame Scrub' constitutes the windup, characters by Prof. Lawrence, Jas. Griffin, Kate Lawrence and Lou Morton. The character changes of Frank Lee came to please greatly. The balance of the programme is filled in with ballads by Minnie Warner, dances by Kate Hunter, clogs by Billy Scott, songs and dances by Johnny Donaldson, and the usual array of artists. Carrie Austin, Johnny Weaver and Billy Reed have closed; the latter, together with Mlle. Augusta, has gone to Evansville, Ind., for the other halls now in the city. . . . . The National Theatre closed its season on the 1st, to re-open about Sept. 1st. The other halls above mentioned intend to keep open all the summer."

SMITH'S OPERA HOUSE company East Saginaw, Mich., still continues to do a good business. Viola Clifton, change artist, re-opened June 3d, and was warmly received. Gus. Clark, Harry Wharfe and Ali Miles are well liked in their various acts. J. P. Hill does an excellent acrobatic act on the single trapeze. M'lle Lopez and family, acrobats and gymnasts, are billed to appear on the 17th. Turner and Lester, Annie Clarke and Ada Whiting are billed to appear on the 10th inst.

AT TAMMANY HALL, Bay City, Mich., a complimentary benefit was tendered Messrs. Peasley and Fitzgerald, double song and dance artists, who are to close on June 8th and go to Detroit, when the house was crowded. Among the new faces on this evening were Billy Devere, an old favorite; Miss Emma Whiting, vocalist; Annie Hapleton, club swingist, and Billy Gray as stage manager. Ella Sheldon, a graceful dancer, and Nellie Howard, jig dancer, volunteered their services and were well received. Peasley and Fitzgerald created a vast deal of merriment, and their departure is regretted. Miss Emma Ostrander and Miss Pattie Jerome are billed. Kittie Rowel and Eva Buckner are retained, both being favorites. . . . . At Joe Mills' Theatre Comique during the week five new faces appeared—M'lle Henrietta, song and dance; Miss Blanche Castle, vocalist; Lew Spencer, Dutch and Ethiopian comedian, and Andy Collom, song, dance and banjoist. The return of Miss Clara May is also noted. Annie West, Ada Whiting, Belle Leore and Harry Wilkinson fill the bill. Turner and Lester, and Harry Brown, London comique, are announced for June 10th, also Miss Viola Clifton.

THE ACADEMY OF MUSIC, Richmond, Va., after having been closed several weeks for repairs, &c., will be reopened June 10th with a new company, including Bowman and Harris, double song and dance; Tim Morris, end man; Mlle. Leoline, danseuse; Ellen Revere, song and dance, also jig, and Miss Louisa Place, wire walker and danseuse. Bowman will act as stage manager, with Messrs. Tyler & Co. as proprietors, who promise a first class show. So wrote our correspondent on June 7th.

AT PIELBING'S OPERA HOUSE, Toledo, O., the business continues good. Turner and Lester were to leave on the 9th, going to Saginaw, Mich.; Miss Millie Irma was also to depart on the same date for Chicago, Ill. For June 10th, Jas. Gaynor, banjoist and cloggist; Maggie Nichols, slack wire performer and danseuse; Lena Clark and Kitty Rowell, vocalists, were announced.

AT THE BIRMINGHAM, Ala., Varieties the following company were performing at our latest advices:—Charles McDevitt, song and dance; Jim Burns, Irish comique; Mr. H. Jacobs, jig and cancan; the Misses Lon Mace, comic; Mary Legrange, sentimental singer, and Mollie Devon, jig, also song and dance; J. C. Murphy is the stage manager, and Whorton and Jacobs, proprietors.

PARTIES having communication with Shelby's Comique, Buffalo, N. Y., are referred to Dan Shelby's card in another column.

THE VICTORELLI FAMILY, gymnasts, can be addressed care of this office.

ALAMO VARIETIES, Wichita, Kansas, is now open for the summer and fall season, under the proprietorship of Sam'l Reaves & Co., with D. K. Russell as stage manager. First class talent is advertised for.

CAVANAGH'S VARIETIES, Scranton, Pa., will close the present season on June 15th, and be re-opened for the fall and winter about Aug. 15th.

MISS JULIA HARWOOD, Maggie McGuire, Cal Shadeville and Prof. Campbell were the new faces of the Comique, Cleveland, O., the past week. The entertainment is generally good, especially Prof. Campbell's "Tambourine Bobby Manchester" feat, a farewell benefit June 7th.

A NUMBER of people put in fresh appearances at the Varieties Theatre, Pittsburgh, Pa., June 3d, viz., the Misses Kate Wilson, Hettie Howard, Clara Bogart, Annie Atkins, Mary Bogart, Emma Ellenger, Annie Jackson, Maria Morten, Maggie Willett, John Denier and Melville and son. The performances commenced with a female minstrel troupe, composed of twelve ladies. Charley Gardner was on the tambo end, and Alfred McDowell manipulated the bones. J. S. Edwards did the middle business. A very creditable first part was given, after which Melville and son indulged in gymnastic exercises, which were successfully performed. A song and dance by Alfred McDowell, dance by Miss Kate Wilson, wire walking by Miss Louisa Bliss, double dance by the Bogart Sisters, song and dance by Annie Atkins, skating act by Austen and Hess, vocalisms by Miss Maggie Willett, song and dance by Charley Gardner, skipping rope dance by Frank Christie, characteristic vocal selections by J. S. Edwards, dance by Louise Bliss, specialty act by John Denier, double voiced vocalism by Dora Dawron, contortion act by Young Lamejeca, and a laughable farce concluded the balance of the fare of the evening's entertainment. The house was well filled, and business has been very fair. John Denier, on the 5th and 6th inst., gave a perilous performance on a rope stretched across the street from the top of the Varieties Theatre to an adjoining building. A large crowd assembled to witness Mr. Denier's intrepidity and skill, and cheered him lustily. At the benefit of Messrs. Doherty and Murphy, on the 6th inst., the house was inadequate to accommodate all. An excellent bill was presented, some thirty amateurs appearing, in conjunction with the regular company. Miss Dora Dawron, Miss Louise Bliss, and Austen and Hess leave after the 8th inst. Mr. Alms, the present manager of the Varieties theatre, has secured a lease of the Fifth Avenue Opera House for next season. Gardner Trimble, it is announced, will control the management of the Varieties Theatre next season. . . . . Tony Pastor's combination closed a brief season at the Fifth Avenue Opera House on the 3d inst. The show was good and attendance large. Ella Wagner, Jenny Engel, Kitty O'Neil, Tony Pastor, Harrigan and Hart, Billy Carter and others were received with much cordiality as old favorites. Miss Jessie Maxfield was with the troupe in Pittsburgh, but took no part in the entertainments. So wrote our correspondent on June 7th.

M. ROUVELETTE, burlesque prima donna, is at present writing a burlesque of "Gilmore's Peace Jubilee," and can be addressed as per advertisement.

HARRY AND FANNIE WOOD are at present performing at the Howard Athenæum, Boston, Mass., where they can be addressed.

WILLIE WHALEN, song and dance boy and ballad singer, advertises that he can be engaged.

LADY VOCALISTS and dancers are wanted for the Academy of Music, Richmond, Va. See advertisement.

J. L. MACLEAN'S THEATRE COMIQUE, New Haven, Conn., in consequence of delay in the alterations, will not be opened until June 23d, when Laura Graham will commence an engagement there with her parlor pictures and serio-comic vocalisms.

THE HENRI FAMILY, gymnasts, hat spinners, etc., can be addressed care of this office.

TRIMBLE'S VARIETIES THEATRE, Pittsburgh, Pa., will be refitted during the summer, prior to the opening on Aug. 15th.

AT WILD'S OPERA HOUSE, Syracuse, N. Y., Miss Hannah Birch did a Spanish dance which took well. This lady met with an unexpected surprise on Thursday evening, at the conclusion of an encore, she being presented with a magnificent bouquet of flowers; also a fine gold watch and chain by her many admirers, she having been a decided favorite here during her stay's sojourn. Miss Belle Gordon made her first appearance in song and dance June 3d, and was well received. The Young Men's Christian Association, of this city, succeeded in getting an indictment against Mr. Wild for allowing the "Can-can" to be performed in his theatre. Mr. W. demanded a hearing, and was discharged at once, proving clearly that no misdemeanor had been committed. The only result of this attempt to trouble him was to advertise his entertainments gratuitously and fill the house nearly every night during the week. Harry Kernell is announced for Monday, June 10th. So wrote our correspondent on June 8th.

AT WALLACK'S THEATRE, Chicago, Ill., nothing now transpired during the past week. Geo. Wilson and Milly Irma are announced for the 10th. Jas. Rayner and Maggie Nichols open at Fielding's Opera House, Toledo, O., on the 16th. . . . . At King's Royal Amphitheatre, Emerson and Granger, Annie Sherwood and Alice Williams, are underlined for the 10th. Chas. Armstrong and Jas. Sanford close on the 8th. So wrote our correspondent on June 7th.

THE THEATRE COMIQUE, Peoria, Ill., has closed up for the present on account of making some alterations. In the meantime the company will take a tour through the rural towns in that vicinity, visiting Princeville, Wyoming, Tonion, Galva, Galesburg, Monmouth, Bushnell, Pekin, Metamora, Lacon, Henry, Washington, Naples and Beardstown.

AMELIE WILLIAMS, song and dance lady and character vocalist, can be engaged from July 1st through her agent, Geo. S. Thurber, of Chicago.

THE AMERICUS COMBINATION collapsed at San Francisco, Cal., leaving the performers in an impecunious condition.

AT THE OLYMPIC THEATRE, Sioux City, Ia., the company consists of McDonald & Flint, proprietors; D. L. Banks, treasurer; Charles Boyd, manager; Prof. Schultz, leader of orchestra; Miss Flora Belle, serio-comic vocalist; Clara Burton, dancuse; Bobby Scott, song and dance, and Alf Bernardo, general performer. Ned Ainsley and Jenny Griffin are underlined for an early appearance.

AT THE METROPOLITAN HALL, Washington, D. C., the fresh appearances on June 3d were Keegan and Clark, Irish song and dance men, who also black up and do end business in good style, and the Zig Zags, who are four French male grotesque dancers. The business of the week was very large. W. H. Deverdie, contortionist; Charley Brown, Ethiopian comedian; Josephine Walby, dancuse; Emma Morrell, musical performer, and Agnes Robertson, vocalist, are announced to appear on June 10th. Those closing June 8th were the St. Felix Ballet Troupe, who go to the Providence, R. I., Opera House, Fernando Fleury and Victoria Howard, who go respectively to Pittsburgh, Pa., and Baltimore, Md. So wrote our correspondent on June 8th.

BECAUSE TONY PASTOR'S agent did not engage Mr. Richmond, a bill poster at St. Louis, Mo., to do the posting for that troupe, the agent alleges that Richmond deliberately covered up a large stand of handsome bills which were placed upon a neutral wall. Such conduct is highly reprehensible, and showmen suffer greatly in all parts of the country from like conduct.

CAL MANDEVILLE, mimic and comique, and Maggie Maguire, vocalist, are at present performing at the Theatre Comique, Cleveland, O., where they can be addressed.

WALTER GAIL, character vocalist and tenor balladist, can be addressed care of this office.

MORTIMER'S VARIETIES, Philadelphia, Pa., can be rented on reasonable terms for four or six weeks, or the proprietor will let it on sharing terms. See advertisement.

A REPERTOIR of perilous reports regarding business at Shelby's Comique, Buffalo, N. Y., crowded houses, may be indulged in for the past week. The only new face on June 3d was Emma Marsh, danseuse. The performance opened with the comedietta of "The Youth that Never Saw a Woman," well rendered by the members of the company, assisted by Miss Emma Grattan as Colin, which character she made a great hit. Mons. Reveni performed skillfully his flying rings act, and Miss Nagle gave a graceful fancy dance. Miss Clara Butler sang "Sweet Spirit, Hear My Prayer," with marked effect. The laughable interinde of "Ole Bull in a Fix" was well rendered by Brown, Reese and others. Emma Marsh, an old-time favorite, was enthusiastically received in her dances, which she executed with skill and grace. Charley Brown gave an acceptable banjo solo and song. The trapeze feats of M'lle Zoe Zemetis and Mons. Reveni were characterized by intrepidity and daring. Miss Emma Grattan brought down the house in her song of "His Heart is True to Poll," and gave a variety of other ballads in pleasing style. The bill concluded with Frank Frayne's sensational military drama of "The Union Scout." Mr. Frayne assumed the character of the hero, Tim O'Hara, and was well supported by the company. In the course of the piece he shoots oranges from the heads of five doomed soldiers, thereby saving their lives. The only departure for to-night is Chas. Brown. The new faces for the 10th are Quilter and Goidrich, song and dance; Harry Guion, negro comedian; Jas. Duniquis, comique, and Chas Worley comedian. On that evening and night, Frayne will produce, for the first time, his drama of "The Lost Ship; or, Lashed to the Mast." An original musical burlesque, called "Little Jack Sheppard," with Miss Emma Grattan in the title role, is in preparation. Owing to the inclement weather last Tuesday evening the lake excursion was indefinitely postponed.

ALL THE CONCERT SALOONS and variety shows in Buffalo, N. Y., save Shelby's Comique, have been closed by the police authorities.

THE VARIETIES THEATRE, Williamsport, Pa., now gives fine entertainments. The new attractions have been Emma Bruce, a graceful fancy dancer; Mollie Russell, song and dance lady; Mlle Leonetti, character dcseuse; Matt Wheeler, Dutch and Ethiopian comedian; Frank Bennett, song and dance man; Fulton Myers, female impersonator, and the gymnasts, the Bernado Brothers. The attendance has increased since the advent of the present company.

TROS. N. DUFF, Dutch comedian and banjoist, advertises that he can be engaged.

AT THE BALTIMORE, Md., OPERA HOUSE, Harry Hart was the fresh appearance on June 3d. Matinees are now given at this establishment on Thursdays and Saturdays. Amy de Brent, vocalist, and the Boston ballet troupe, were to close on the 8th, and Den Howe, Tillie Howe, Claudia Walters and Lizzie Davis announced to appear on the 10th.

D. L. MORRIS AND FRED. AND EMILY SIEGEL, made their appearances at the Theatre Comique, Detroit, Mich., June 3d. Kitty Leroy and Agnes Sutherland close on the 8th, and on the 10th, Rosa Lee, and Pessly and Fitzgerald are announced. . . . . Jas. Vincent, late of the Lisa Weber party, is home at Detroit, enjoying vacation.

THE WILLIS-THORNE COMBINATION, comprising Geo. Willis, comedian and pantomimist; Harry Thorne, clown; Lillie Bertine, serio-comic vocalist; and Martin, gymnast, can be engaged through Geo. W. Haines, agent, whose address is in another column.

JAMES MELBOURNE, comic vocalist, who can be addressed care of this office, wants an engagement.

A PARTNER, who can furnish six hundred dollars capital, is wanted by Hubert Barry, who advertises.

THE WASHINGTON VARIETIES COMPANY, Providence, R. I., assisted by Messrs. Stalker and Hopkins' traveling company, gave a fine entertainment at Harrington's Opera House on the 7th. A double clog dance by Sheridan and Lee, Master Willie Fox's Dutch eccentricities, Little Maggie Benson's songs and dances, and Jennie Benson's clog dancing were well done, and the farce of "Gotlieb" was cleverly performed by J. S. Murphy, Ed. Danker and Adele Pattap. Harry Robinson and Ella Bedin threw up their engagements with Stalker and Hopkins at the last moment. Geo. Burton and Hattie Howard join the Varieties on the 10th. C. M. Bassett, balladist, joins the traveling company which starts on the 10th. So wrote our correspondent on June 8th.

ANDY MORRIS, clown, advertises that he can be engaged.

MORTIMER'S PHILADELPHIA VARIETIES was well attended last week, an attractive programme being presented. Miss Kitty Brooke, vocalist, being the only new appearance, her opening [illegible] comic songs was much applauded. Billy Barry displayed rare comic talent in the amusing sketches of "The Ladder of Fame" and "Bad Whiskey," and Sam Devere in his capital Dutch delineations. Miss Helene Smith in her pleasing song and dances, and Miss Alice Bateman and Wm. Koonan, in their challenge clog dance, made up an enjoyable evening's entertainment that was concluded by the drama of "The Life of Jack Sheppard," in which Miss Lucy Clifton sustained the title role with considerable ability. This week a new melo-drama entitled "The Wreck of the Alice" will be produced, and Miss Maggie Gray, banjoist, will make her first appearance at this establishment.

PERFORMERS are wanted for the Atlantic Garden, Wilkesbarre, Pa. See advertisement.

FULTON MYERS, Ethiopian comedian, and Miss Millie Russell, danseuse, opened at the Williamsport, Pa., Varieties on the 3d inst.

AT THE SEVENTH STREET THEATRE, Philadelphia, Pa., Bernard and Woolsey's Minstrels, a new organization, played during the past week to fair houses. Joe De Angelis and Lew. Brimmer were on the ends in the first part, and Paul Berger and J. L. Woolsey sang some sentimental ballads. The Lauri Family appeared in the second part in their amusing pantomime of "Lord Dundreary" and the shadow pantomime. Chas. A. Gardner in his Dutch songs and dances, Lew. Brimmer in banjo solos, and Tommy Turner as "The Active Boy," were the other chief features. Gardner, Brimmer and Woolsey's Minstrels closed here on the 8th inst., and will be followed by the Mastitons, in their grotesque acts, for one week only, commencing on the 10th inst.; the Lauri Family will also appear.

THE LAST WEEK of the season at the Howard, Boston, Mass., has introduced for new attractions, Leffingwell, Emma Pierce, and the Chapman Sisters in the burlesque of "Cinderella," and John Hart in his Ethiopian performances. Next week a summer season will commence with Harry Bloodgood's combination, including Bloodgood, Gus Williams, the great Pedanto, Fanny and Harry Wood, the Rice brothers, the Freeman sisters, Andy Leavitt, Tommy and Willy Daly, Rob Hart, Joe Buckley, and others. So wrote our correspondent on June 8th.

TONY PASTOR and his traveling troupe are announced to perform during the present week at St. Louis, Mo.; New Albany, Ind., June 17th; Frankfort, Ky., 18th; Lexington, 19th, and Louisville, 20th, 21st and 22d.

MARVIN, acrobat, trapeze performer and ceiling walker, advertises that he can be engaged.

Negro Minstrelsy.

AT THE ALHAMBRA THEATRE, San Francisco, Cal., a densely crowded audience was present May 27th, when Simmons & Slocum's Minstrels, from Philadelphia, Pa., made their first appearance. A strong prejudice, with good foundation, naturally existed in favor of the recently-departed Emerson band; still the new-comers were cordially received and were not subject to hypercriticism. The rising of the curtain revealed a semi-circle of eighteen performers. Russell, one of the remaining Emersonians, was heard to excellent advantage in "Home by the Sea." Master Donald Harold revealed a smooth, pleasing voice, in "Driven From Home," and J. E. Murphy, to whom fell the remaining sentimental selection, earned an encore for his rendering of "Darling Little Daisy." The ends, with E. M. Slocum as interlocutor, were well supported by Billy Sweetnam and Lew Simmons—the former of whom, whose style much resembles Simmons's, speedily won considerable favor. In a song and dance in Dutch costume, Welch and Rice gave a grotesque performance, and Sweetnam's ballad style was repeatedly encored. One of the best things was Eddie Fox's violin performance, with comic imitations, while Sheridan and Mack, who remain over from the Emersons, by their artistic songs and dances, shine as principal stars. Sweetnam, Sheridan and Ad Ryman, of the Simmons, are held in reserve, an improvement in the olio may be looked for upon their appearance. So wrote our correspondent on June 6th.

THE SAN FRANCISCO MINSTRELS opened at the St. James Theatre, Boston, Mass., June 3d, and have had ever since most excellent houses. They are the best minstrel troupe that has visited us this long while. This week the first part included "Little Darling Linger Near Me," Lew Benedict's medley feeling by C. Templeton; a Tyrolean song by J. L. Oberlet; the comic ditty "Life's Hard to Love," given with great humor by Charley Backus; "My Little One's Waiting for Me," excellently rendered by D. S. Wambold; "Liza Jane," by Billy Birch, and "When the Moon with Glory Brightens," by E. Markham; the whole closing with imitations from nature by Lew Benedict, a second embracing Bobby Newcomb's "When the Bells are Ringing," a burlesque on "Bertha, the Sewing Machine Girl," and a song by Markham. Backus' picture book came next, and contained some really excellent imitations of Forrest, Fechter, Charlotte Cushman, Maggie Mitchell and others; then "Kum and Kiss Me," followed by banjo solos by Billy West, the whole closing with the sketch, "Good Boys." Next week they give a complete change of programme. So wrote our correspondent on June 8th.

DAN BRYANT'S MINSTRELS opened for a week at Wood's Theatre, Cincinnati, O., on June 3d. Our correspondent writes of them as follows:—"They have had one solid series of packed houses, and have fully equaled expectations. Billy McAdrews, in his 'Afternoon Man' and other plantation songs, also in his old-time delineations, seems to be the bright particular star of the company. He has made a strong hit. Dan Bryant and Dave Reed have made things lively on the ends, also in the farces. Charles D'Alberte, W. F. Stanley, J. A. Barney, W. H. Brockway and Rockefeller form the vocal corps. In the olio, besides several farces, a good double song and dance by Barney and Rockefeller, and a sparring duet by Stanley and D'Alberte, and Mc Andrews appeared in his character act. The leading piece through the week has been 'Uncle Eph's Dream,' with McAndrews and Bryant as Old and Young Eph. The Bryants open in Lexington, Ky., on the 10th; Louisville, 11th, where they remain three nights, and at De Bar's, St. Louis, Mo., on the 14th. On the 17th, Billy Manning's Minstrels are to appear at Wood's."

SKIFF AND GAYLORD'S MINSTRELS are announced to perform at the Richmond, Va., Theatre for three nights, commencing June 18th.

CARNCROSS AND DIXEY'S MINSTRELS open at the Academy of Music, Pittsburgh, Pa., June 10th, for one week. . . . Cumming's Minstrels are booked for one week's performance at the Pittsburgh, Pa., Opera House, commencing on June 10th.

CAL. WAGNER'S MINSTRELS gave two exhibitions at the Academy of Music, Pittsburgh, Pa., June 7th and 8th.

THE NEW ORLEANS MINSTRELS are billed to appear at Portland, Me., June 11th and 12th.

W. H. HERMAN is the musical director of Dupree and Benedict's Minstrels, and not Louis Gumpert, as stated by our Cincinnati, O., correspondent in our past issue. Our correspondent was not to blame, however, as Mr. Gumpert's name was on the bills as holding that position, Mr. Herman having only joined the troupe about a month since.

DUPREE AND BENEDICT'S MINSTRELS are billed to perform at Toms River, N. J., June 10th; Bricksburg, 11th; Red Bank, 12th, and Keyport, 13th.

CARNCROSS AND DIXEY'S MINSTRELS performed at Titusville, Pa., to good business, June 4th and 5th; Petroleum Centre, 6th; Oil City, 7th, and Franklin, ats.

SOMS AND DANCE MEN, end men and general performers, and a brass band that can play string, are wanted for the Alabama Plantation Minstrels. See advertisement.

ARLINGTON, COTTON AND KEMBLE'S MINSTRELS are running along in the even tenor of their way. Johnson and Powers are taking immensely in their double song and dance, "Let Me Be," and in other no less favorite acts. Chas. Howard, the excellent old plantation character impersonator put in an appearance on the 3d and has created a pleasing impression. Dwyer and Kayne are introduced in the "Lard and Watch," which they render in a style of excellence. The closing piece, "Vinegar Bitters," proves a good winding up play, sending the audience home in good humor. . . . . Dan Bryant's Minstrels open at the Halsted St. Opera House, July 1st, for one week. . . . . Emerson's Minstrels at Michigan Avenue Theatre, the 17th, for two weeks. . . . . Tony Pastor at the Metropolitan soon after. So wrote our correspondent on June 7th.

CAL WAGNER'S MINSTRELS are to perform at Williamsport, Pa., on June 13th.

HOOLEY'S MINSTRELS were greeted by a good and enthusiastic audience at Harlem, N. Y., on Monday evening, June 3d, when the company commenced a travelling season of two weeks, the route of which we published in our past issue. Their performances gave full satisfaction.

Circuses.

THE NORTH AMERICAN CIRCUS and "Humpty Dumpty" pantomime troupe performed at Branford, Conn., June 4th; Milford, 5th; Norwalk, 6th, and go thence to Waterbury, Wakefield, Wauconda and Canaan.

VAN'S OLYMPIC SHOW performed at Bloomsburg, Pa., June 5th; Mansfield, 6th; Tioga, 7th; Lawrenceville, 8th, and is billed ahead as follows:—Elkland, 10th; Knoxville, 11th; Troupsburg, 12th; Jasper, 13th, and Andover 14th. The leading features in this show are H. D. Van Lewen's swinging wire; William Johnson's cannon ball feats; acrobatic feats by Teetsell, Smith, Allard, Phillips and Griffiths; classic groupings by Phillips and Smith; leaping by Griffiths, Long, Thompson, Smith, Allard, Robinson, Teetsell and Master Frank; Lee Powell, clown, and Prof. Hawes' opera band.

WARNER'S CIRCUS AND MENAGERIE is billed ahead as follows:—Hudson, O., June 10th; Brookville, 11th; Liberty, 12th; Richmond, 13th; Cambridge City, 14th; Louisville, 15th; Rushville, 17th; Greensburg, 18th; North Vernon, Ind., 19th; Seymour, 20th; Columbus, 21st; Nashville, 22d; Bloomington, 24th; Spencer, 25th; Martinsville, 26th; Morrisville, 27th; Indianapolis, 28th; Greenville, 29th; Danville, July 1st; Greencastle, 2d; Brazil, 3d, and Terre Haute, 4th.

KLECKNER & CO.'S CIRCUS, MUSEUM AND MENAGERIE is to exhibit at Easton, Md., on June 10th; Denton, 11th; Centreville, 12th; Chestertown, 13th; Massey's Cross Roads, 14th, and Elkton 15th.

HOWE'S LONDON CIRCUS performed at Brattleboro, Vt., June 1st, and on Sunday afternoon Mr. J. A. Emidy and his cornet band visited the grave of the late Col. James Fisk, Jr., where they performed a variety of appropriate music. The cemetery was crowded.

CHARLEY KING is now playing clown with James Robinson's Circus in place of Fred. Wilson. It will be seen by a card in another column that he was recently presented with a gold watch and chain.

HARRY CLARE, trapeze performer, with Dr. Backenstose's Circus, fell at La Crosse, Wis., May 31st, and broke three of his ribs.

CIRCUS BUSINESS IS RAGING to a great extent in Chicago, Ill., and seems to be the all-absorbing topic of conversation in amusement circles. Adam Forepaugh's Circus, Menagerie and Museum gave its first exhibition on the 3d to a crowded house, and at every entertainment since the mammoth tents have been filled to their utmost capacity. The acrobatic feats of the Wallalla Bros. and tight-rope business of El Nino Eddie are excellent. The collection of animals is very large and are in excellent condition. In the side show may be seen the "Wild Australian Children," M'me Hellene, the bearded lady; Miss Sarah Belden, a diminutive lady; two Circassian princesses, and several other curiosities. Dick Sands, Billy Wild and other prominent actors are connected with the concern. They remove to the south side on the 10th for three days, then appear at Wheaton the 13th, and up through this state and Wisconsin. . . . . L. B. Lent's New York Circus will be here on the 17th for a four days' stay. . . . . Nixon's Amphitheatre continues to do a large business and the entertainments are of uniform excellence. Mlle. Geraldine, Mons. Leopold, Com. Foote and sister, appeared in conjunction with the regular company on the 3d, and have proved valuable acquisitions. Geraldine and Leopold's double trapeze act being among the best we have seen. Their 'Lulu's Sensation Act' is rightly applauded. Geraldine stands erect on a low staging, and at a given signal, by some ingenious contrivance, is thrown into the air a distance of some twenty feet and is caught by Leopold, who is hanging on a trapeze by his feet. Commodore Foote and his tiny sister are introduced in a variety of pleasing acts that take well. The balance of the performance is made up with the usual amount of tumbling by the company, juggling by Sig. Francis, double pad act by the Randall Brothers, excellent equestrian feats by Ella and Katie Hooker, etc. The Bunsler Family did not come to time. The party representing himself as agent of the company proved a fraud. Ling Lock, the Fire King, and brother, appear on the 10th. George Roscoe is the advertising agent of this concern." So wrote our correspondent on June 7th.

WM. FOOTE, JR., advertises a circus lot to rent in Buffalo, N. Y.

THE NORTH AMERICAN CIRCUS and "Humpty Dumpty" Troupe are billed ahead as follows:—Waterbury, Conn., June 10th; Wolcottville, 11th; Winsted, 12th; North Canaan, 13th; Millerton, N. Y., 14th; Copake, 15th; Hudson, 16th; Catskill, 18th; Saugerties, 19th; Kingston, 20th; Rhinebeck, 21st, and Poughkeepsie, 22d.

THE CONKLIN BROTHERS' CIRCUS is billed to perform at Wenona, Mich., June 12th; Saginaw City, 13th; East Saginaw, 14th, and thence to Bay City.

HOWE'S GREAT LONDON CIRCUS opens at the Fair grounds, Boston, Mass., on June 16th, continuing four days.

J. E. WARNER AND CO.'S CIRCUS opened a season of four days on the base ball grounds in Cincinnati, O., June 4th. Our correspondent writes:—"They have given two exhibitions daily, drawing good audiences each afternoon and crowded tents in the evenings. The show is very respectable, having a good performing elephant, 'Empress,' and a museum of divers curiosities besides the regular circus. The street procession is quite imposing, though the banners and wagons begin to grow a little dingy. O'Brien's feat of a double somersault over 'Empress,' the elephant, creates great enthusiasm. Leona Dare gives a good performance on the trapeze, and the Rodgers family in athletic and gymnastic feats are a leading feature. Prof. A. J. Forepaugh performs three full grown lions."

GEO. LEOPOLD and Geraldine, gymnasts, &c., at present performing at Nixon's Amphitheatre, Chicago, Ill., can be engaged after June 17th, through their agent, Col. T. A. Brown.

ROSEDALE, SPRINGER AND HENDERSON'S CIRCUS AND MENAGERIE spread canvass at Troy, O., on June 5th, and is billed ahead as follows:—Hartford City, Ind., 10th; Marion, 11th; Xenia, 12th; Kokomo, 13th; Tipton, 14th; Noblesville, 15th. M'lle Alice, trapeze performer, with the above concern, met with a serious accident at Springfield, O., on June 4th, falling from her trapeze to the ground, a distance of twenty feet, injuring herself so

ACADEMY OF MUSIC,
MILWAUKEE, WIS.
The Academy of Music is located on Milwaukee street, between Michigan and Wisconsin streets, and covers an area of 135 feet front by 132 feet depth.
The Audience Room is on the ground floor. The main entrance leading to the Dress Circle and Parquette is 24 feet wide; the entrance to the Balcony Circle at the north end of the building is 8 feet wide. There are seven wide isles in the Parquette, Dress and Balcony Circles, and exits enough to allow egress for an auditory of 1800 persons, in less than five minutes.
The Stage—one of the largest in the United States, being 55 feet deep, and 72 feet wide—is especially adapted for the performance of Operas and the Drama, and has been fitted up according to new and most approved plans, with all modern improvements.
Especial attention is called to the fact that in connection with the Stage there are fifteen large and commodious Dressing Rooms, (closets and wash rooms attached), which will afford ample accommodation to the largest Opera and Dramatic Companies.
THE SEATING CAPACITY OF THE HALL IS 1200.
The seats are of the Cooper Institute pattern, covered with the first quality of red plush.
